CARMEL NOSTALGIA

Strong links remain to a glittering, fading past

By JOANNE HODGEN

CARMEL is a village that can touch its past.

Bohemian artists, political radicals, writers and performers were all an integral part of a rich history younger than the pine trees towering above Carmel's Comstock homes.

Frank Lloyd, a Carmel city councilman, was a young boy when he came to Carmel in 1911 with his parents and baby brother.

Growing up during Carmel's creative heydey, Lloyd encountered many of the intellectual and artistic minds of that time as well as the business people and tradesmen who founded the village.

Lloyd remembers much of Carmel's founder, Frank Devendorf:

BY 1902, DEVENDORF owned most of the property that is now Carmel after a series of land exchanges.

In that same year, Devendorf filed the first survey map of Carmel with a San Francisco title company.

After moving here early in the century, he encouraged artists and actors to migrate to Carmel. It soon became a popular summer colony.

Lloyd has fond memories of Devendorf and knew him as a fine looking, well-spoken, gentle man. "He and his wife were lovely people."

Devendorf's attitude towards Carmel was one of a benevolent godfather, Lloyd said. He encouraged many fine intellectual people and those in the arts to move to Carmel.

He sold Carmel land to them for almost nothing and donated the land for the Forest Theater.

"I think he felt Carmel would develop as a community of taste in that he encouraged people to come here who would give the area good character," Lloyd said.

Burt Comstock (not related to architect Hugh Comstock), according to Lloyd, was a carpenter who quoted Devendorf as telling the people of Carmel to "enjoy it before rich people took it away from them."

LLOYD SAID he also has fond memories of the people and activities centered at Forest Theater between 1910 and 1920.

"My father played the role of an Indian in the West Coast premiere of Mary Austin's play The Arrowmaker in 1914," he noted.

independent woman, Lloyd said. Her great concern was for the land and Indians of the Southwest.

She was an intellectual making her way on her own in the world.

Lloyd remembers that her life was filled with sadness. A marriage that disintegrated and an unhealthy child placed great burdens on her.

Lloyd made his stage debut at Forest Theater in about 1912 or 1913 at age 6 or 7.

"My brother made his stage entry in a baby carriage pushed by our governess, a black woman," Lloyd said. "She was probably the first black in Carmel."

Carmel River Inn expansion

Flood warnings linked to zoning

By JOANNE HODGEN

CITING FLOOD PLAIN HAZARDS and opposition to further expansion of visitor-serving facilities in the Lower Valley, the Carmel City Council has voted to oppose the proposed county rezoning of the Carmel River Inn from residential to "visitor accommodation."

The Council voted 3-2 during a special session Monday, Nov. 17 to inform the county Board of Supervisors of its opposition.

Mayor Barney Laiolo and Councilman Howard Brunn favored the rezoning.

Also discussed was Mission Ranch, a motel, restaurant and tennis complex behind Carmel Mission that is in an R-1 or residential zone. The use of the property is non-conforming.

'If people want to build where a flood is and take a gamble then it's their problem.'

Amid protests by neighbors complaining of noise, the council took no action on the Mission Ranch issue when it was assured by part-owner Rolf Stolesen that building expansion is not planned.

A Board of Supervisors hearing on an amendment to the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan (part of the county General Plan) designating the Carmel River Inn property "visitor accommodations" was scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 25 at 2:30 p.m.

The inn, on the west side of Highway 1 north of Carmel River, is zoned by the General Plan for urban and rural residential land use.

The inn has 22 cottages, a 19-room, two-story motel and a swimming pool.

The developers, headed by lawyer Myron Etienne Jr., have requested a zoning amendment to allow 45 more cottages, a second swimming pool and tennis court on the 10.7-acre site. One existing cottage would be removed.

Etienne wants the designation changed to "visitor accommodations" to allow a rezoning from ST-D (eight units per acre) to multiple-family residential use (R-3-D-B-5). The R-3 district allows resort accommodations with a use permit.

AFTER DENYING rezoning in 1978 because it was inconsistent with the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, the county Planning Commission recommended approval of the project in April.

In 1978, commissioners ordered an environmental impact report for the proposed expansion, based on concerns that the property is in a flood zone and the coastal zone, that it is next to single-family homes and that the project would result in more traffic on Highway 1.

Etienne told the council Monday the developers intend to maintain the same atmosphere on the grounds that exists today.

"We don't want to impact 9.55 acres with a high-density project. We will do a better job as far as flood protection than is being done today," he said.

Changes tc the Carmel River corridor and the project itself cannot be seen from Highway 1, according to Etienne.

"There will be no traffic impact on the residents of Mission Fields," he said.

OPPOSING THE project was former Mayor Gunnar Norberg, who said it would fuel problems in the floodplain area.

Norberg noted a picture of the River Inn under water during the 25-year flood in 1958 that appeared on the cover of an Army Corps of Engineers report.

"The whole business is an intrusion on the floodplain," Norberg said.

He said the county applied flood zoning in the Lower Valley but never enforced it.

Citing the Army report that called the zoning "capricious," Norberg said the "short answer to all of this is tht the answer should be no."

EARL MOSER of Hacienda Carmel said that "as projects go I think it's a good one.

"I think without question when the 100-year flood comes that Mission Fields will again be flooded and this area (the River Inn) will be flooded unless surrounded by a sufficient dike."

'He said the county applied flood zoning in the Lower Valley but never enforced it.'

He said 14,000 cubic feet of water per second flooded Mission Fields in 1958. Moser said a 100-year flood would carry 25,000 to 29,000 cubic feet per second and, under the worst circumstances, 42,000 cubic feet per second into the Lower Valley.

Diking, he said, would force floodwaters to the other side of the river, which would endanger the Carmel Sanitary Plant.

"Any condition attached to this rezoning should require that any building permits must be protected from the 100-year flood," he said.

Moser suggested that the Odello property on the east side of Highway 1 just south of Carmel River be purchased by the federal government as a floodplain. That would be economical, he said, compared to the funds the government would pay if the 100-year flood occurred, inundating the shopping centers and other developments in the Lower Valley.

JOAN SOLAK of Carmel, who opposes the expansion, said increased traffic from the project would add to the congestion on Highway 1 which is now "totally impossible."

Rod Holmgren, a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Carmel unincorporated Local Coastal Program, said the draft LCP would require a flood management survey to be completed before development could be approved.

Nancy Schneider of Mission Fields and a member of the CAC, said the committee had deleted that requirement from the draft plan with a vote of 6-5.

Laiolo observed, "If people want to build where a flood is and take a gamble then it's their problem." He asked what could be done when other developments have already been built.

Etienne reiterated the mayor's statement. "It's our money and our risk," he said.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold, who opposes the rezoning, read a portion of the River Inn EIR which noted the property's "open character would be significantly reduced and replaced with an urban aspect" if the expansion occurred.

"The riparian (river bank) corridor, in its function as a wildlife habitat, aesthetic resource and stream-bank stabilizer, would be diminished by project implementation," she said.

Mrs. Arnold said that after walking on the property with Etienne, she decided "the amount of diking necessary to protect that area is phenomenal.

"If it were successful in being able to dike in this area it (floodwaters) will break out in areas that aren't protected.

"When you protect one area it's got to pop out somewhere."

COUNCILMAN HOWARD BRUNN, noting that few people from the Mission Fields area who would be affected had attended the meeting, said "Mission Fields is going to be so much better off than if it (the project) doesn't happen."

The issues, he said, are not the flooding of Mission Fields or the project density but the zoning of the area.

Councilman Frank Lloyd said he would favor the project if the cottages could be built without altering the zoning. "The basic problem is that changing the designation to visitor accommodation might open the door to development we cannot see now," he said.

Opposing the rezoning, Brown said that diking along the Odello property and other land forces the water further down the river. "Everybody dikes up and there's got to be a point where it gives," he said.

He also noted that traffic would be increased. Brown cited a study prepared by Etienne which estimated 21 cars per hour would flow onto Highway 1 from the Inn. Because visitors are likely to drive during busy hours of the day, "we are looking at 84 vehicles per hour," he said.

Laiolo said after looking at the site that he would rather see the cottages built than a hotel like the Holiday Inn.

"As I mentioned, 'if you want to live on the river, old man river can come up any time. You can't protect people who want to live on the river,'" he said.

Mrs. Arnold said that it was "unconscionable" to permit development on the floodplain when it is "our tax dollars" that are used to rebuild.

Before the vote, Etienne reminded the council that the developers want to "bring the zoning back to what it was originally."

"No matter what happens here or what happens November 25th, we still have to go back (to the county) and get a use permit."

FEARING FURTHER expansion of Mission Ranch, the council asked Stolesen, part owner and developer, to report changes that are planned.

"We are a non-conforming use. We have no plans to develop Mission Ranch," Stolesen said.

Before a near-capacity crowd, Stolesen said that several units were gutted for remodeling, though their size was not to be expanded. The county building inspector issued a stop-work order on the project until the level of improvements permitted was discussed by the county, he said.

Neighbors have complained of noise from the Mission Barn, where rock dances are held, and of traffic noise from patrons coming and going.

REPRESENTING about 100 residents, retired Army Col. Earl Power said they want the area to remain in R-1 zoning.

Though non-conforming use does not permit expansion, Power said work has been started on a "non-official" basis. The building has not been enlarged, he said, though the business was expanded. Power cited dancing five nights a week and restaurant expansion.

'As I mentioned, "if you want to live on the river, old man river can come up any time."'

"There are more rental units today than when it started. How does that happen?" he asked.

DAN DALY of Dolores Street in Carmel asked why the city is considering "anything on this" when a zoning change was not proposed.

Elizabeth Bell, a former Carmel school district trustee, said Carmel Mission Basilica, Serra School, River School and Mission Ranch exist within a limited area. The Basilica, she said, serves more than 500,000 visitors a year, while Mission Ranch has 35,000 visitors annually.

She said that the 1976 Coastal Act states wherever appropriate, public facilities will be distributed throughout an area to mitigate crowding.

Because the Carmel Mission is in the Carmel LCP and has historical significance, the council must tackle the issue, she said.

"Can't you see how it is used around the clock?"

The council said no action was required for the Mission Ranch project since an expansion is not proposed.

Council members said a dialog between the neighbors and owners might alleviate problems.

Norberg reflects on past politics

Ex-mayor was a 'lone voice'

By JOANNE HODGEN

GUNNAR NORBERG said soon after he was elected mayor in 1976 that as a city councilman he had felt like a "lone voice in the wilderness crying out and getting little reaction."

When he left office earlier this year, Norberg said he again felt a little like the wolf. But after 16 years of serving Carmel — 12 as city councilman, four as mayor — Norberg would claim major victories as well as defeats and frustrations.

Sitting at a redwood table in front of his Carmel home, Norberg, 73, reflected on his years serving on the City Council.

Norberg was first elected to the council seat in 1958. He lost his re-election bid in 1962, but was again elected in 1966 and 1970. He was elected mayor in 1976, promising to protect Carmel from special-interest and business groups.

IN 1958, NORBERG'S INFLUENCE was felt immediately.

He battled for a Carmel Arts Commission and Forestry Commission that were eventually endorsed unanimously by the council.

And, in his first move to stop the growth of tourist-oriented businesses, Norberg fought for the adoption of a planning regulation that required each motel or hotel unit to be a minimum of 1,000 square feet. Existing motels and hotels with smaller units became non-conforming.

As mayor, he said he tried to lift that limit to 2,000 square feet, but "I never could get anyone to agree with me."

Because it was so costly to build units of that size, he said motel construction came to an end. The idea met with great opposition, particularly from the business segment, he said, but "by the end of '59 the council merged to vote four out of five."

The Forestry Commission is still intact.

However, Norberg said the Arts Commission was "obliterated" in 1967 soon after Sunset Center was purchased. "My fellow city councilmen wanted to stop me from doing what I wanted to do," Norberg said.

Architects, developers, engineers and others were "straining at the bit," Norberg said, because he and the public had blocked them.

Norberg said that because the Arts Commission was presided over by his late wife, Barbara, he "presumably had too much influence."

THE SUNSET COMMISSION was formed by the council.

It was eventually replaced by the Community and Cultural Commission.

Long active in Carmel's theater activities, Norberg introduced a plan in 1978 for the Festival of Firsts Playwriting Contest. The council endorsed the plan and Carmel became the only city in the nation to make cash awards to new playwrights.

"What I wanted to do — was to change a point of view that municipalities will provide space, but then will do nothing about what is done in the structure," he said.

'I think it will be just as common 100 years from now to have a human sanctuary as a bird sanctuary or animal sanctuary.'

The contest, he said, may inspire other cities to take the place of aristocrats of past eras who supported artists.

"To pay for an opera season would be chicken feed for a city like Carmel. The cost is so little compared to the money spent for purposes nobody is for or against," he said.

Though Norberg influenced the character and culture of Carmel during his years as councilman, he had hoped that his term as mayor from 1976 to 1980 would be a period of major accomplishments.

The "old Carmel" slate was swept into office in 1978, carrying with it a majority of council members who supported his planning ideas.

Gunnar Norberg

Anderson said, "That slogan about saving Carmel did it.

"Who could disagree with that? You might as well say you're against mom and apple pie."

"But," Norberg reflected, "the majority (on the council) isn't that consequential in itself.

"It has a basic weakness. It is influenced by people who would be at cross purposes with saving the Carmel area."

'It will become more and more difficult to oppose development.'

Those people, he said, persuaded council members that the measures "I would go to were extreme. They (the council) had my point of view, but weren't willing to go the full mile."

A CONTROVERSY during his term as mayor involved a zoning regulation that would have established a distance of 500 feet between similar tourist-oriented businesses.

That included gift shops, art galleries, motels, hotels and restaurants.

His proposed ordinance also stated: "Any owner or developer who intends to develop property of as much as 8,000 square feet in size shall "submit to the Planning Commission a proposed preliminary plan for review."

The limit in the Carmel building regulations had been and remains 32,000 square feet.

The intent of the proposed regulations was also to prevent multiple (chain) enterprises from being established within 1,000 feet of one another.

Prepared by the Committee on Administration composed of Norberg and Councilman Mike Brown, the zoning changes were returned to the Planning Commission for review. The City Council never adopted the plan.

"Every time I try to knock chain enterprises people say I'm going to knock free enterprise in the head," Norberg stated.

'I felt it was my duty to preserve the essence of Carmel for posterity.'

A county planning guide, Norberg said, states municipalities can regulate the locales, height and size of establishments and "finally the intensity of land use."

Capitalizing on that vaguery, Norberg said cities that have a low opinion of certain businesses (i.e., pool halls, cocktail lounges) can space them apart.

Norberg insisted he was not putting the tourist-oriented businesses in that category. "'Intensity of land use' just says if there are too many of something you can space them out."

What thwarted the regulations from being implemented?

"It isn't the City Council, it's the lawyers representing businesses," Norberg said.

Asked if Planning Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson's plan to establish a maximum number of similar businesses would be more successful, Norberg said, "There's no provision in the county planning act to place numbers on land use.

"It seems to me everybody tries to figure out a way to accomplish what I have tried for years.

"If you stick with what is permitted then you have a chance in court. This thing (the proposed regulations) is in the (county) plan and doesn't need a court decision. It's hard to understand why they are trying to go sideways."

ANOTHER FRUSTRATION Norberg said was his failure to implement his plan for a Heritage or Sanctuary City encompassing Carmel and its environs.

"Heritage City is on some back burner," Norberg said.

Introduced into but never adopted by the Legislature, the Heritage City plan would have established one government body to govern the 632-square-mile area that is now the Carmel school district. Development would have been closely regulated.

Though the plan was then called impractical, Norberg said he is certain it will become reality some day.

"I think it will be just as common 100 years from now to have a human sanctuary as a bird sanctuary or animal sanctuary.

"In some space of time my idea or ideas like them will take hold," he said.

A City Council that had once wholly supported Norberg became a roadblock to his plans.

"I think the basic problem of the people who happen to be on the City Council . . . is that they are still perturbed by the idea of offending friends or neighbors. The dilemma is reduced to a personal basis rather than what, in the long run, is in the interests of community," he said.

The business he once owned, Norberg Travel Agency, "was never really successful," he said, because his ideas were at cross purposes with prospective clients.

Though he is dedicated to preserving the "essence of Carmel," the greatest danger to the city lies at the mouth of Carmel Valley, according to Norberg.

Norberg said the Lower Valley has remained outside Carmel's jurisdiction because "people didn't want to go through the City Council."

In 1971, the city was at the forefront of a battle to block the development of the Odello land just south of Carmel River. The Odello property west of Highway 1 was eventually purchased by the state and still remains open space.

The Lower Valley, which contains the Odello land, Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, The Barnyard, office buildings and condominiums, lies in the 100-year floodplain.

During the massive flood in 1958, Norberg said the Odello artichoke fields were under water. "It could be under water again," he warned.

"The peril is if a combination of things (special interests) are trying to attack, then the local community cannot meet them on several fronts. It will become more and more difficult to oppose development."

By continuing to develop the Lower Valley, he said, "they are creating their own ultimate funeral, but in the meantime they make money."

CARMEL EXERCISED its strength while Norberg was mayor when it filed two suits to block development of Carmel Valley.

A suit against the county demanded an environmental impact statement be completed before the Carmel Valley Master Plan was adopted.

A second suit was filed against Rancho Canada Lodge to block its expansion.

Looking back on his years on the City Council, Norberg reflected. "I felt it was my duty to preserve the essence of Carmel for posterity."

"It needs to be preserved because it is one of the extraordinary places in the world."

What if a quake hits here?

By JOANNE HODGEN

ANIMALS FRANTIC with an unknown fear scurry around yards howling at unseen enemies.

Carmel and Carmel Valley residents at first curious about their animals' behavior soon ignore it.

But a low rumbling, unheard by human ears, has begun.

An invisible, undulating force grapples with the earth below, sending shivers through the foundations of homes and offices.

Windows rattle and splinter as the force builds, rocking homes and catapulting furniture across rooms like a battering ram.

When the earthquake ends 60 seconds later, frightened eyes survey the damage caused by California's natural enemy.

Carmel suffers little damage.

But Carmel Valley has become a wasteland. Homes built on steep slopes have slid down hillsides. The shopping centers, unable to bear severe ground shaking, have crumbled. Carmel River has changed its course.

AN EARTHQUAKE is an event that could happen anytime and anywhere in California, according to John Kingsley, department chairman of earth sciences at Monterey Peninsula College.

Carmel and Carmel Valley have escaped severe earthquake damage in the past, he said, but "earthquakes do funny things. Any place in California is a risk."

The severe earthquake Nov. 8 in Northern California registered 7.0 on the Richter scale.

Though a spokesman for the U.S. Geologial Survey Office of Earthquake Studies said a period of earthquake activity seems to have started again, Kingsley said nobody can determine that accurately.

"We may be moving into a period on the West Coast of more active movement in the crust," he said, "along what we call the Pacific Ring of Fire."

The Carmel area is about 25 miles west of the San Andreas fault, the most active fault in California. It runs for 650 miles from Shelter Cove on the coast of Humboldt County to the Salton Sea in the central region of Southern California.

Geologists, Kingsley said, study areas determined to be probably high and low risks in an earthquake.

"I would say Carmel itself is a lower risk area than say the Carmel River mouth," Kingsley stated.

CARMEL PLANNING Director Bob Griggs said that if the epicenter of a major earthquake were in Hollister, 30 miles northeast and on the San Andreas fault, little damage would be suffered within the city limits.

However, Carmel Valley would not be as fortunate, he noted.

The damage incurred is not only determined by the types of structures, but by the land homes and offices are constructed on.

Carmel is on a granite base, according to Griggs, while Carmel Valley is chiefly on alluvial deposits.

According to a report published by the California Division of Mines and Geology, short-period, rapid, low-level motions are typical of granite, while "deep valley alluvium exhibits longer period (slow) higher level motion which is more likely to damage structures."

'Carmel Valley could suffer from severe landslides if groundshaking occurred, the study said.'

Alluvium is a term for sediments like silts, sands and gravels that are transported and deposited by streams.

PEOPLE LIVING in single-wall construction homes, common in Carmel, are usually safer than those living or working in masonry-type structures, Griggs said.

"Single-wall houses are the ones I want to be in," Griggs stated. The Carmel police station, he said, is made of rigid masonry. "Though it may not collapse, it will have a lot of damage because of rigidity," he said.

The geological report stated, "Many wood-frame houses standing next to faults which have ruptured the surface in great earthquakes have remained standing while masonry structures at some distance (75 miles) on soft ground have been severely damaged."

During the San Francisco earthquake of 1906, Carmel only suffered moderate ground-shaking, while Salinas, which rests on alluvial soil, suffered major damage to structures, Griggs said.

The San Francisco quake registered 7.9 on the Richter scale, emitting a force equal to 12,550,000 tons of TNT, according to the geological report.

Earthquakes are triggered by the movement of the earth's plates. Those plates are floating on a zone of rock. Earthquakes occur when two plates are pushed against each other or when one plate overrides another.

But the San Andreas fault, blamed for the recent Northern California earthquake, is not the only active fault in California. "We have the San Andreas fault moving all the time," Kingsley said, but others are potentially active.

THE GEOTECHNICAL Study for the Seismic Safety Element listed 17 known faults in Monterey County.

According to the report, three faults are active — the San Andreas, the Monterey Bay Zone and Palo Colorado-San Gregorio faults.

A portion of the Monterey Bay Fault Zone in the north bay south of Santa Cruz has "several northward trending segments in an area about five miles wide that end along the north bank of Monterey Canyon," the report stated.

The Monterey Canyon head is at Moss Landing and continues nearly 40 miles into Monterey Bay, according to Kingsley.

In the south bay, a similar area extends between Monterey and Seaside, according to the report. The report noted that a well-defined fault zone connects Monterey Bay to Carmel Valley. The Navy Berwick Canyon faults are part of this zone, the report said.

"A fault line appears to project landward into Palo Colorado faults," the report said.

Epicenters have recorded earthquake magnitudes of up to 5.5 where the San Gregorio fault joins Monterey Canyon.

Kingsley said in the 1920s a moderate earthquake of 6 or 6.5 on the Richter scale occurred in the middle of Monterey Bay.

The study also claims that six northward faults between Cypress Point and the northern limit of Seaside are all potentially active.

Though the epicenter of an earthquake probably would not be in the Carmel area, Carmel Valley could suffer from severe landslides if groundshaking occurred, the study said.

The geological report claimed that the most prominent landslide in the county is in Carmel Valley and Corral de Tierra area.

The report said landslide factors included seismic shaking, steep slopes, weak earth materials and high groundwater levels.

KINGSLEY said there is a high risk of a landslide occurring in the south side of the Carmel Valley.

Faulting exists on the north side, but the rocks are more stable, according to Kingsley.

Carmel stone, a slatelike rock, is common in Carmel Valley, he said. It has a tendency toward sliding, he said.

"Any steep slope with a building is a high risk," Kingsley said.

"California is a lacework of faults all connected with the San Andreas system.

"They are all active moving faults."

Emergency Plan

Disaster: Carmel is ready

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE CITY OF CARMEL is prepared for a disaster.

An earthquake, windstorm and other natural disasters as well as a nuclear war are addressed in the city's Emergency Plan adopted in 1979.

The intent of the document is to coordinate the operation of critical services during an emergency.

The plan is implemented when a state of war, as defined by the California Emergency Services Act, is declared or when the governor proclaims a state of emergency. An order of the mayor or the director of emergency services will also put the plan into action.

The city administrator, who becomes director of emergency services, coordinates the activities of city departments.

FIRE CHIEF Bob Updike said each employee is to report to his or her supervisor.

Headquarters for emergency services is in the basement of the Carmel Police Station, he said.

The Fire Department, he said, is in charge of firefighting and rescue. After a nuclear attack, firemen would use special equipment to determine the level of radiation.

The Public Works Department is in charge of "heavy rescue," he said — moving damaged structures and maintaining roads. The police are in charge of security.

Working with the City of Carmel would be the Carmel chapter of the Red Cross. Not only does the Red Cross provide food and shelter to diaster victims, but assesses damage to structures in an area, according to Col. John Root, head of the Disaster Committee.

The estimates must be completed before victims can apply for state and federal aid.

Important to communications, according to Root, is the Amateur Radio League, a group of ham radio operators who would provide emergency communications. In a disaster, Root said he believes "power and telephones would go out."

BEFORE AN EARTHQUAKE occurs, safety precautions can be taken.

The California Division of Mines and Geology recommends:

• Earthquake hazards in the homes should be removed or corrected. Top-heavy objects and furniture should be fastened to the wall and water heaters and other appliances bolted down.

Above the fourth or fifth floor of tall buildings, heavy objects should be fastened to the floor or wall. Stout guard rails should be installed across windows which extend to the floor.

• Supplies of food and water, a first-aid kit, flashlight and a battery-powered radio should be stored.

• One or more members of the family should have first-aid knowledge because medical facilities are often crowded.

• All members of a family should know how to shut off utilities.

AFTER A MAJOR EARTHQUAKE has occurred, the department recommends the following measures:

• Check for injuries. Do not move injured persons unless they are in immediate danger of further injury.

• Check for fires and hazards. Contacting the fire department may be difficult. Swimming pools, lakes and creeks are possible sources for fire fighting.

• Utility lines to a home should be checked. If gas leaks exist, shut of the main valve. Do not use matches until you are certain there are no gas leaks.

• Water mains may be damaged. Emergency drinking water can be obtained from the water heater, toilet tanks, canned fruits and vegetables and melted ice cubes.

• Do not use the telephone unless it is an emergency. Reports can be obtained by turning on the radio.

• Stay away from beaches, where seismic or tsunami (tidal waves) can strike.

STAY AWAY from steep, landslide-prone areas and from earthquake-damaged structures.

DREAD Christmas shopping?

Well, take heart because what might normally be a chore can turn into an exciting event if you're planning to attend the 10th Annual Homecrafters Marketplace Saturday, Nov. 22.

"We have over 50 spaces available for booths this year and there will be an array of unique gift items for sale," said Richard Tyler, community and cultural director of Carmel. "The creative work is done at a hobby level by the people involved and many of them have unusual hobbies."

The event will be held in the main parking lot at Sunset Center from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Homecrafters Marketplace is an opportunity for the non-professionals who make crafts, art of homemade salable articles to sell them in an open-air craft festival which brings buyers and sellers together in a community event.

Crafts included in this year's event are driftwood, raw wood, metal, boutiques, weaving, knitting, macrame, baked goods, stationery, children's boutique items and a variety of Christmas decorations including ornaments, wreaths and stockings.

Many Peninsula schools will have booths and the Carmel High School will serve lunch.

Those who wish to participate may go to the Sunset Center director's office and fill out a registration form and pay the $3 registration fee. The office, at Eighth and San Carlos, is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

About 50 spaces are available. Preference will be given to Carmel residents. Non-residents who meet all qualifications will also be accepted.

"Ages of those taking booths range from young teen-agers to people in their 80s," said Tyler. "Many of them work on the items year round, and some give all their proceeds to various charities."

Friends of Hidden Valley holds annual reception

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

BARBARA MORRIS' French country home was the perfect setting for the Friends of Hidden Valley Annual Membership Reception, Nov. 9.

About 250 guests enjoyed the gala event, which included wine provided by A.L. Romano Wine Co., San Francisco, and Robert Mondavi.

Rouge et Noir, Petaluma, provided the gourmet cheeses.

Guests mingled throughout the spacious home while Sal Mercurio of Salinas played French country music on his accordian.

In the sunken living room overlooking the Pacific, the Chamber Music Group from Hidden Valley entertained the guests with two selections: Debussy's String Quartet, first movement, and Beethoven's Duo for Clarinet and Cello. The musicians included David Dolly (violin), Ruth Kaufman (violin), Linn van Meter (viola), Carmen Martin (cello), Liz van Loon, (cello), and Craig Alzenak (clarinet).

Friends is sponsoring two fund-raising campaigns this year — the Carmel Decorators Showhouse and tournament bridge.

Anyone interested in participating in the bridge may contact Mrs. John E. Brock at 624-5104.

years, Lloyd said. More pine trees surrounded the theater then, but its appearance is essentially the same, he said.

LLOYD MOVED from Carmel in 1920, but returned during summer vacations in his college years.

He continued to participate in Forest Theater productions.

In 1926 he performed with his one-time sweetheart Barbara O'Neil, whom he said became a famous actress.

Her roles included that of Scarlet O'Hara's mother in Gone With the Wind.

MANY CORRESPONDENTS came to Carmel from the San Francisco area.

They included Jimmy Hopper, a war correspondent who followed the Mexican Army during the Mexican revolution from 1911 to 1914.

'Essentially, you can't live in the past, but you can look back on an idyllic time.'

Early Carmelites also included revolutionaries Mrs. John Kenneth Turner, who in turn supported the revolutionary forces battling Mexico's president Dios.

Activists and writers were often one and the same.

LLOYD TELLS of Carmel's "celebrated visitor" Jack London:

"He eschewed Carmel and the fog. A friend of the Hoppers, he hardly spent any time here.

"Jack London was an out and out socialist," Lloyd said, "and as I see it now he was also a racist. If you read Valley of the Moon, he supported the pure Anglo-Saxon race. He was concerned with people coming from the Orient and putting Anglo-Saxons out of work."

It was a time, Lloyd said, when William Randolph Hearst warned of the "yellow peril."

BUT FOR Lloyd, then a small boy, it was a wonderful period.

"My brother and I did not have to go to school. We were allowed to grow up like little Indians," Lloyd said.

"My mother had been a professor and my father was a professor of botany. The school figured they would teach us at home. They didn't teach us very much, but we learned many things about the outdoors."

Lloyd remembers a Carmel with sandy roadways, false-front stores and sand dunes.

"Everything was sand except for a redwood boardwalk on Ocean Avenue. Even Ocean Avenue was unpaved in the winter of 1915. Storms would wash great gullies in it," Lloyd remembers.

At the foot of Ocean stretching toward Eighth was a big flat and a frog pond on one or two acres full of toad and frog eggs.

There were toads everywhere under the sand. Across from Sunset Center were sandy banks full of toads.

At Junipero between Ocean and Sixth stood a large livery stable called the San Carlos Riding Academy. The Leidig grocery store and Carmel Development Co. founded by Devendorf and Frank Powers were where Dansk II is today.

'People did not want progress. Progress was a bad word.'

Horses and cars shared the streets of Carmel. Carmel, Lloyd said, was a self-contained, small town. The Leidig store sold apples, corn, potatoes and milk from the Hatton Ranch at the mouth of the Valley.

Lloyd and Andrew Stewart, who ran the Martin farm, provided the eggs.

CARMEL HAS ALWAYS had tourists, Lloyd noted.

In early Carmel they were nicknamed "tin can tourists."

They came from the Central Valley in wagons and Model T Fords to escape the heat and enjoy the fog. They earned their nickname because they looked at Carmel from their wagons or cars and would eat their cans of beans.

When Ocean Avenue was paved there was a great deal of controversy, Lloyd said.

"People did not want progress," he said. "Progress was a bad word. Carmel was always a residential community . . ."

Early day builders, carpenters and bricklayers included families like the Ohms, Turners, Murphys, Wilkinsons, Dummages, Wilsons, Nortons, Wermuths and Stoneys.

In addition to the grocery store, the Leidigs owned a wood yard where the Nielsen Brothers Market now stands. They also once owned the block that Carmel Plaza was eventually built on.

THE EARLY DAYS of Carmel, Lloyd said, were a wonderful time that could not survive.

Carmel was too near the rail head and is now too near the airports and developments, he said.

"Essentially, you can't live in the past, but you can look back on an idyllic time."

Protecting river vegetation

Well project conditions appealed

By STEVE HELLMAN

CALIFORNIA-AMERICAN Water Co. has appealed as "unworkable and impractical" two major conditions attached to its $4 million well project in Carmel Valley.

The conditions — ordered by the Monterey County Planning Commission when it approved the four new wells Oct. 8 — require Cal-Am to protect vegetation along the Carmel River and place a limit on the amount of water it can pump from the Valley's aquifer.

The county Board of Supervisors will conduct a public hearing on the appeal at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 25 in the County Courthouse, Salinas.

At stake, according to Cal-Am General Manager Richard Sullivan, is the very feasibility of the controversial water project.

Sullivan maintained in a five-page appeal filed Oct. 27 that the commission has ordered the water utility to commit too much water, too many technical resources and an unfair amount of capital to protecting too large a section of the river bank vegetation. He also charged that the pumping limit imposed on Cal-Am could preclude the company ever using the four new wells.

The conditions "make Cal-Am's investment of about $4 million in those new wells and related treatment plant virtually useless," Sullivan declared.

Sullivan also questioned the rushed atmosphere in which the commission adopted the conditions.

The two conditions were among 14 conditions attached to the use permits approved for the four wells after a lengthy public hearing Oct. 8.

The commission found itself pressed for time to complete its deliberations and vote on the permits, so little discussion was given to the conditions or their intent. The first 12 conditions, which Cal-Am does not contest, were included in an agreement reached between Cal-Am and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The agreement calls for Cal-Am to landscape around the four wells, use submersible pumps to avoid noise and to provide one percent of the water from the four wells along with irrigation equipment to protect vegetation around just those wells. It also calls for Cal-Am to conduct an experiment to determine the area affected by the four wells and to rotate all its existing wells to lessen the impact.

At the core of the issue are concerns that Cal-Am's 15 high-volume wells have lowered the water table and caused vegetation along the river to die. Long-standing and widespread opposition to the four new wells among residents was based on fears that Cal-Am's wells had indirectly contributed to loss of vegetation that anchors the river banks against erosion.

Many residents asked that if the county approved the four new wells it should order Cal-Am to irrigate the vegetation not only around those, but that it should also restore the vegetation around all its wells. Some residents even argued that the four wells should be prohibited because of problems with the existing 15 wells.

'Any restriction on its existing operation would violate well-established precepts that existing use permits cannot be subsequently amended, he argued.'

COMMISSIONER WILLIAM PETERS of Carmel Valley suggested the two additional conditions with sweeping requirements as a trade-off for approval of the four wells.

The conditions require that:

• Cal-Am protect riparian (river bank) vegetation in an area 200 feet from both sides of the river in a swath from Highway 1 to the San Clemente Dam.

Within that area, which more than covers the company's series of existing wells, Cal-Am is to provide aerial photographs of the riparian corridor, replace injured vegetation and maintain annual records at the County Planning Department on the condition of the corridor.

• Total Cal-Am withdrawal from the aquifer shall be limited to the maximum annual withdrawal of 5,600 acre-feet until such time as the water management district and Cal-Am prove that the protection measures are effective.

The limit may be temporarily removed by the county in the event of a drought, but conditions pertaining to irrigation shall not be removed except in a "most dire emergency."

Sullivan stated in the appeal that the two sweeping conditions were attached so hastily at the end of the meeting that "no debate or discussion of these two conditions was permitted.

"Cal-Am will be required," he continued, "to irrigate or replace vegetation or provide the economic resources to do either or both for an extensive stretch of property."

The condition may require Cal-Am to provide "as much or more water for such irrigation than it will be able to produce from its new wells," he stated.

By contrast, Sullivan noted, the company had consented in its agreement with the water management district to provide one percent of the water from its four new wells for irrigating vegetation, an amount that Sullivan contended is adequate.

The one percent of water from the new wells, however, would be used for vegetation around them and was not intended for vegetation surrounding its whole series of wells.

Requiring Cal-Am to provide enough water to irrigate around the entire system would "make the new wells economically unworkable and unacceptable," Sullivan stated.

He also argued that the condition assumes all vegetation stress will be due to Cal-Am pumping.

"There is no evidence to support that conclusion," he charged.

"It is well documented that there are a number of other property owners pumping water from the Carmel Valley underground (supply) without any present governmental restraints whatsoever," he stated.

'It is well documented that there are a number of other property owners pumping water from the Carmel Valley underground (supply) without any present governmental restraints whatsoever, he stated.'

Sullivan cited the 1978 CH2M-Hill report sponsored by Cal-

Cal-Am wants to expand plant

By STEVE HELLMAN

CALIFORNIA-AMERICAN Water Co. proposes to expand its Begonia iron removal plant in Carmel Valley for processing water from four new wells.

The expansion would add 11 outdoor 10-by-30-foot steel tanks, a 10-by-75-foot concrete block extension to the existing building and more than double the 181,500-gallon settling pond at the plant, west of Dorris Drive behind the Begonia Gardens.

The Monterey County Planning Commission will consider the use permit for the proposal at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 26 in the County Courthouse, Salinas.

Cal-Am had planned to build a separate iron removal plant near San Carlos Road as part of its $4 million water project in the Valley, but strong opposition from residents led to abandoning the site.

The plant, which would have consisted of an 18-foot high building housing tanks, pumps and other equipment and also an outdoor settling pond, was proposed to filter high levels of iron from the underground water.

The use permit for the four new wells to be located in the lower Valley was approved by the commission Oct. 8, but action on the iron removal plant was postponed while the county certified the environmental impact report for it.

THE COUNTY, meanwhile, had received many complaints from residents along San Carlos Road and in the surrounding hills that overlook the site. They opposed locating the new plant there because it is in a residential neighborhood where they said its operation would be a visual eyesore and noisy disturbance.

The Lower Valley Advisory Committee had voted unanimously last year to oppose building the iron removal plant near San Carlos Road. It cited adverse impacts on the Carmel River, a unique stand of trees that would have to be cut into and increases in traffic.

Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley proposed Oct. 8 that Cal-Am abandon the plan to build the San Carlos iron removal plant, and instead consider enlarging its existing Begonia plant.

Cal-Am notes in its application for the use permit to enlarge the plant that it is designed to handle six million gallons per day.

To accommodate water from the four new wells, the company would have to build an additional pipe gallery which would be housed in reinforced concrete block construction, extended from the existing main building.

The additional filtering capacity requires 11 filter tanks set on both sides of the proposed addition to the building, and also requires enlarging the decanting basin or settling pond from 181,500 gallons to 380,000 gallons.

Submersible pumps would be used to eliminate noise, the company states, and trees would be planted along the north side of the site to screen it.

There would be no increase in traffic once the addition was finished, the company maintains.

"Overall," it states, "there will be only aesthetic changes because of the additional extension of the building."

Cal-Am calls pumping limit too low

Am which concluded that the 1975-76 drought caused 70 percent of the damage to vegetation in the Valley; the report, however, has been discredited by the county and other experts.

The limit on Cal-Am's withdrawal of water from the aquifer violates established precepts on its operation, Sullivan argued.

He noted that Cal-Am's maximum withdrawal from its existing wells was 5,632 acre-feet in 1976. The 5,600-acre-foot limit would mean, he contended, that "Cal-Am may never be allowed to withdraw one additional drop of water from its four new wells."

While the condition could make Cal-Am's investment "virtually useless" if it were unable to provide effective irrigation and protection measures for the vegetation, Sullivan also noted that the condition could restrict the company's withdrawals from its existing wells.

Any restriction on its existing operation would violate well-established precepts that existing use permits cannot be subsequently amended, he argued.

Our Premier Interest/Checking Plan.

Maintain a $1000 minimum balance in this plan, and you can have an Interest/Checking plan free of monthly service charges. You'll earn 5¼% annual interest on the same money you use to write checks.

Our Grand Interest/Checking Plan.

Holiday time means party time

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

HOLIDAY TIME is fast approaching — and it's time to decide which turkey gets the honor of cooking the one with the feathers.

And, according to "green grocer" Joe C., if you don't buy your cranberries early you may have to settle for the slippery stuff in the can.

Be that as it may, Carmelites will find no shortage on the social scene. Black-tie affairs and fireside gatherings are holding the pace while everyone gears up for the Christmas extravaganzas.

pine whispers

Bud Allen and Russ Harris are already hard at work on a Christmas gala for the Rotary women at the Beach and Tennis Club Dec. 10 — and that's just the beginning!

HUNDREDS OF FRIENDS

Take a Saturday evening — add good music and a roaring fire — open the doors to a couple hundred good friends drifting in throughout the evening — and you have the casual get-together at Tom Bleecker's Carmel home.

Tom, who is talented in all areas of film work including writing, producing and directing (he's also the ex-son-in-law of Julie Andrews), invited the single set in for nibbles, including hot pizzas that kept arriving at the front door, and lots of the bubbly.

It was easy to locate the party as cars were lined up in all directions. Many of the guests drifted in after closing their own businesses for the evening — so there was an interesting mixture of people.

Richard Scudder picked a comfortable pillow on the floor in front of the roaring fire and chatted with Misty Hall, a newcomer (and an artist) to Carmel. Richard also took a lot of teasing from his buddy, Alan Cordan.

One of Tom's special guests was Kathy St. Johns, who was visiting from the Los Angeles area for the weekend. I could be wrong, but I think Tom said that Kathy, who is the granddaughter of the famous author Adela Rogers St. John, is also a writer and actress.

Another interesting guest who dropped by after hours — in all black — for a bit of good wine and conversation was Clint Eastwood, who does justice to any color, including black!

Patsy Pearson is such a great cook that she usually ends up in the kitchen at parties, but not this time. Pat joined the group by the fire and enjoyed relaxing while someone else worried about the food.

Party host Tom Bleecker with Kathy St. Johns.

Barbara Martin had put in a full day sticking parking tickets under windshields, so she also forgot about work and enjoyed herself.

Another late-comer was Ed Johnson, co-owner of Toots Lagoon. Ed, looking snazzy in a three-piece suit, claimed to be the best dancer at the party — sharing a couple of new steps with Barbara Martin. Hate to tell you this Ed, but no one else was dancing.

The guest list goes on and on — but the important thing is that it was a fun get-together.

So, along with all his other talents, Tom gets bouquets as a marvelous party host.

TARTAN BALL

The gala Tartan Ball was a winner!

Good parties may be hard to find, but it was full steam ahead at the 14th annual Tartan Ball presented by the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula last Saturday evening.

The affair was held in the Barbara McNitt Ballroom at the Naval Postgraduate School, and about 150 guests were on hand for the event, which included colorful dress, pipes and drums and the arrival of — the haggis!

Dress for the evening was either Highland or black tie.

Is A Problem Drinker Destroying Your Marriage?

• Read Every Word

If a problem drinker is hurting you, you can be sure he's hurting himself too – or herself. Alcoholism does not respect sex, age or color. How long can you go on? If you're ready to do something about it, remember this . . . you can help the alcoholic even if he or she doesn't want help.

• What Not to Do

Don't accuse – he or she will never admit to drinking too much. Don't try to reason with the problem drinker. Alcohol abusers are seriously ill, and the illness affects the mind as well as the body.

• What You Can Do

The best thing (and really the only thing) you can do for problem drinkers is to get them to professional help. Fast. The CareUnit Program in your local hospital offers a unique program that works. Given the right environment and an effective treatment program, alcoholism is a treatable disease. We prove it every day. In a few weeks, the problem drinker can look forward to resuming a useful and productive place in society. And you can look forward to a happy, normal life once again.

• How to Begin

Begin by calling your local CareUnit immediately, and talk to a staff counselor. You alone can help the alcoholic. Call now and make an appointment to see a counselor. You needn't be hurt again.

PREPAYMENT PENALTIES

You've sold your home. Your buyer obtained new financing with a new mortgage. Therefore, your old mortgage was, undoubtedly, paid in full with part of your proceeds from the sale. Paying off a mortgage in advance of its original loan length is known in the trade as "prepayment."

Many lenders today require a prepayment penalty if a mortgage is paid off prior to its original due date, and you'll find this can amount to several hundred dollars.

If you paid this penalty, don't forget that the Internal Revenue Service treats the prepayment penalty the same as interest — which can be a valuable deduction from your income tax.

But, in spite of the tax break, always try to bargain for the smallest prepayment penalty or no penalty at all. In fact, in many states, consumer-oriented laws have been passed which prohibit any prepayment penalties after the home loan has been in effect from three to five years.

Advertisement

Many of the men wore kilts and the women looked very Scottish in their long gowns with Tartan sashes.

Music for dancing was provided by the Joe Tick Combo, and entertainment included a Scottish country dance group whose members included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Garvie and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cowan.

Garvie was also the ceremonial toastmaster for the very involved "haggis ceremony." According to Rod Dewar, entertainment chairman of the gala, haggis is a national dish of Scotland — and is made with ground meat, oatmeal and spices and cooked in a sheep's stomach.

The arrival of the haggis included a procession with bagpipes followed by a bottle twirler — then the haggis was carried in on a huge silver tray — with the chef following close behind. The procession made its way around the room and then the tasty ceremonial dish was delivered to the head table. Other delicacies on the unusual menu included cock-a-leekie soup and prime rib Aberdeen.

The Pipes and Drums of the Monterey Scottish led by Roderick MacKay entertained.

Emcee for the gala was Gordon C. Craig.

And everyone had a haggis good time!

ARTISTS TO NAPA

Artists, heaven love them, have a remarkable way of seeing the unique beauty all around us — and a perfect example is the recent trip of Eloise and Andrew Kozak of Carmel who visited the beautiful Napa Valley last week.

"We saw all the glory of the fall colors of the vineyards and trees of the forest that can equal anything that the New England area has to offer," said Eloise. "And it's right here in our own Northern California — an artists' paradise!"

Andrew, an internationally known wildlife artist, has many of his works in the private collection of long-time friend Michael Robbins, who owns Spring Mountain Winery in St. Helena — and a visit to see Michael was the first stop on the Kozaks' agenda.

They were also house guests of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Barron at their beautiful ranch in Calistoga at the north end of Napa Valley.

Mary Grace Barron and Eloise were classmates at Ward-Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn., many years ago where each studied art, art history and art appreciation.

Gilbert and Eloise are also long-time friends and natives of San Diego.

The Kozaks donated an original painting of two beautiful cheetahs to the Friends of the Big Sur Coast for its Lame Duck dinner held recently at the Big Sur Lodge.

The painting was bought by writer Rosemary Rogers.

RICK IS BACK

Traveling Rick is home again!

Rick Abdalla, manager of the Bank of America (mouth of the Valley branch), has a great habit of leaving the desk work behind for a few days each month while he heads to some exotic part of the world.

This time he skipped the fishing bit in Canada or Mexico and headed for the big island of Hawaii, town of Kona, where those special coffee beans are grown.

Rick, who stayed at the Kona Inn, said a trip around the island left him in a state of amazement.

"You go from the total desolation of lava beds to lush rain forests," he said. "There are areas where you can drive up the mountain and then down into parts of a volcanic crater."

According to Rick, the weather is magnificent — sunshine and beaching it in the mornings — and always a bit of rain each afternoon. As for evening entertainment, there was belly dancing at the Kona Hilton, disco at the Kona Surf — and always a luau or dinner at Dorians!

Some bankers have all the fun!

CUPID OUT-SHOT

Big-hearted Cupid (Jeffrey O. Lach) finally got a taste of his own good medicine — all because he had a birthday recently.

Cupid is always on call to make other people happy, and that means wearing his red and white outfit and arriving at his destination loaded down with heart-shaped, satin arrows to aim at newlyweds, birthday people, anniversaries or whatever. He'll even deliver breakfast in bed or sing your favorite ditty.

Tim and Mary Dale Berrey of Carmel join in the sing-along at Jeffrey Lach's birthday party.

Co-hosting the gala for their favorite heart-and-song man were Pat Pearson of Carmel and Helen Coyle of Pacific Grove.

Guests were treated to their favorite cocktails and a goulash dinner with all the trimmings, including Pat's special salad and French garlic bread.

Dropping by to wish Cupid best wishes were newlyweds Tim and Mary Dale Berrey, who were married Oct. 11 at the Carmel home of Robin Rote. Tim is a carpenter and Mary is a dental hygienist for Dr. John von Berg of Carmel Valley — and since neither of them could take time off from work for a honeymoon — "we ran away and spent the night at Holiday Inn," said Mary.

Others joining in the celebration included Joe Pasko, Ed and Mary Dickie, Sandy Danner, Geoff Cathers, Leslie Simon, Jeff Whitmore, John Affinito, Betty Day and Char Barr.

As the evening progressed, everyone enjoyed a bit of birthday cake (red, white and heart-shaped) and watching Cupid open his birthday gifts, including a new set of red velvet wings and "devil horns."

Those who could play the piano took turns tinkling the ivories to a heard-around-the-block sing-along, but no complaints were forthcoming.

Cupid, who had made his first delivery of "hearts and arrows" at 6:30 that morning, simply sat back and enjoyed every minute of having the shoe on the other foot.

new arrival

Kallista Michele Green

Welcome to the world to little Miss Kallista Michele Green, who arrived at Community Hospital at 9:30 p.m. Oct. 31.

Kalli weighed 8½ pounds and was 21½ inches long. She has brown hair and big blue eyes and, according to her mother, is a very good and beautiful baby.

Kalli is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Michael Green of Carmel. She also has a 9-year-old sister, Nicole, who is delighted with the new arrival.

Her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green of Washington State. Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Victor Nelson of Seattle.

Grandpa and Grandma Green are visiting baby Kalli, and grandpa Dick will be arriving for Thanksgiving.

Kalli's dad, a certified public accountant in Carmel at Green and Slade, refuses to join in the diaper brigade, but according to Mrs. Green, he's good on the floor-walking!

As for the family pets — felines Lady and Inga and Zephyr the Dalmation — they're all giving Kalli plenty of room until she's a bit older.

20-40 Club

They remember a quiet Carmel with many new people arriving

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

THEY CALL themselves the 20-40 Club.

And they have every right to think of Carmel as their town — because they remember when it was a quiet, small village and people were arriving to open new businesses or start a new way of life.

They get together throughout the year for social events including an annual dinner-dance. This year's gala, held at the LaPlaya Nov. 2, marked the 33rd annual affair.

About 70 members participated in the fun, which included cocktails, an endless array of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres and a sit-down dinner which featured a baron of beef with all the trimmings.

Later in the evening the portable dance floor was rolled out, and guess where the band appeared from? Right. Dan Snell played his clarinet, Barney Laiolo, his gutbucket, and Marion Leidig, the piano — and one of the guests just happened to have his saxophone with him.

"The group started around 1946 with 10 or 12 people who had arrived here after the war," said Laiolo. "We held get-togethers downstairs at the Church of the Wayfarer. It was decided to form a club and bring in other people in the same age bracket so that people could meet people."

The group decided that total membership should not exceed 100 — and in one year that goal was reached.

"No one had a lot of money in those days, so most of our social events were backyard picnics and weenie roasts at the beach," said Laiolo. "The children were involved at that time, but after they grew up they were not eligible to become members."

The group's activities now include theater parties, dinner at new restaurants, annual barbecues and other events.

Each year the members choose three couples to be board members for the club. This year's board is Dale and Virginia Leidig, Barney and Elinor Laiolo and Sidney and Ginge Williams.

Barney and Elinor Laiolo.

New officers who will take over in January are Sally and Alex Von Drachenfels, Jim and "Mike" Pruitt and Ray and Janice Smith.

"It's unbelievable, but the club has stayed intact and most of the original members are still here," said Laiolo.

Among the original members who attended the gala were Ted and Marie Fehring, Herb and Roxie Banks and Gene and Marie Shaefer.

Greenhouse orchids

Some African temptations for Monterey Peninsula

By JERRY FOOTE

THE LOCAL GARDENER visiting South Africa will find the city of Durban of great interest.

Much of the city is a garden itself, set against a beautiful background of the Indian Ocean and the hills which rise above this busy port. In the spring the jacaranda trees are in full bloom, threading through the red roofs of the residential areas. Color spills over fences, through gates, along the streets, even in parking lots. The warm, subtropical climate is similar to that of Kauai and southern Florida; secretly envious, the Monterey gardener can only admire the flora of this very different area, asking himself whether it would be possible to grow some of its plants in his cool, dry environment.

Although I advocate the use of plants which are native or similar in their requirements for local gardens, there are some temptations which I find very hard to resist. After seeing the gorgeous orchids at the Durban Botanic Gardens, I can understand the local collector who finds great satisfaction in greenhouse gardening. He is attempting something very difficult and often expensive — the creation of a miniature climate in which exotic plants can flourish. It calls for constant attention and devoted care, but the results must be very satisfying.

If I were to find a greenhouse in my Christmas stocking (an unlikely event), I would plant the jade vine, Strongylodon, and sit happily under its exquisite foliage. I would most certainly grow the South African orchids Angraecum conchiferum and Bartholina burmanniana. The glowing, vermilion Disa uniflora would have a special place there. However, people are not hothouse plants, and gardens are for people, so eventually we must step outside, leaving behind the allure of the artificial environment.

Actually, the Durban garden is a good lesson in the adaptability of many plants which do cross the borders of climatic zones with ease. I found such heat-loving plants as the banyan, banana trees, lotus and papyrus living together with plants which we associate with the temperate zones of the world: Canterbury bells, pansies, larkspur, delphinium, iris and alyssums. The lesson seems to be to attempt unlikely combinations, to be daring in designing borders and to be ready to accept failure if some experiments are unsuccessful.

Another example of tolerant plants is the herb garden, which is filled with the familiar herbs of California gardens. I wondered at the pleasure of meeting them half way round the world. It was very like meeting an old acquaintance unexpectedly in a strange place. One is apt to greet him with an affection not usually proffered at home.

I made a list of herbs which I have not yet tried to grow in the Valley. One is Marrubium vulgare, or horehound, which has my favorite gray foliage. Another is comfrey, Symphytum officinale, with its attractive pointed leaves. Two unfamiliar plants which have good lavender blooms are Hemizygia persimilis and H. petiolath; I shall be looking for them in catalogs and nurseries.

WANDER WITH ME for a few hours through this paradise.

Sit by the water garden and marvel at the beauty of its water lilies and iris. On a small island in the middle of the lake is a willow tree, adorned with the nests of the weaver birds. The tree is alive with motion and color as the birds flash in and out.

Look at the architectural details which add much to the beauty of the plants. There is a flight of stairs leading to an upper level. The balustrade is made of carved stone, softened by a covering of Ficus repens, severely clipped. In another spot, two large brick urns in the shape of baskets stand at a focal point on a path. A very modern piece of sculpture stands before two fine specimens of the Ficus cotinifolium.

Lastly, come with me to an out-of-the-way corner of the garden where an old slave bell hangs in a stone archway. Its days of calling the slaves to and from the fields are over, but it stands as a reminder of the passage of time.

On a tile at its base is written a quotation which I copied down to remind me always of a lovely day in this very special place:

The clock of life is wound but once,
and no man has the power to tell
just when the hands will stop,
at late or early hour.

Now is the only time you own;
live, love, toil with a will.
Place no faith in tomorrow,
for the clock may then be still.

Anon.

Hearing in slaying is scheduled today

A PRELIMINARY hearing for the man charged with the slaying of Robert Vaccaro, 39, of Carmel, is scheduled for today in Superior Court in Monterey.

The suspect, Earl Payton, 19, of Seaside, is charged with murder and robbery in the death of Vaccaro, according to John Phillips, assistant district attorney.

He is also charged with robbery and attempted murder of Gustavo Guillen and robbery of Teresa Guillen of San Francisco.

The death and robberies occurred Oct. 17 on Garrapata Beach, according to Detective Sgt. Randall Fisher of the county Sheriff's Department.

Fisher said a man approached the Guillens, who were camping on the beach, and robbed them. The man then walked over to Vaccaro, who was also camping, robbed him and then shot him in the head, Fisher said. The man then returned to the couple and shot Guillen in the head, said Fisher.

Vaccaro was taken by helicopter to Community Hospital, where he died from the head wound, Fisher said.

Guillen, who Fisher said turned his head when he was shot, lost an eye. He was recently released from Community Hospital and has returned to San Francisco, according to Fisher.

If convicted of first-degree murder, Payton faces 25 years to life in prison, according to Phillips.

He said he expects the district attorney's office to file for "special circumstances," which would carry the death penalty or a life sentence without possibility of parole.

Coastal Program hazard report is approved

By JOANNE HODGEN

A DRAFT BACKGROUND report on Carmel Coast hazards was approved by the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Local Coastal Program (Carmel area).

The report, prepared by the Monterey County Planning Department, was adopted with changes made to the flood hazards portion of the report, when the committee met Thursday, Nov. 13.

Committee Chairman Harold Seyferth said the staff recommendation was changed that would have postponed development in the Lower Valley until a floodplain management survey was completed.

County staff had contended that piecemeal flood protection which now exists endangered property.

He said the citizens' committee agreed that the wording was too strong. Because no deadline was incorporated into the draft plan, it would be unfair to landowners who could not develop their property until the survey was finished, he said.

Also discussed at the meeting was the draft land use report prepared by the staff. Only minor changes need to be made to the plan before it is adopted, Seyferth said.

The advisory committee will meet weekly until Dec. 11 to discuss the draft Local Coastal Program. The combined draft LCP will then be reviewed at public hearings conducted by the county Planning Commission and the supervisors.

Final approval comes from the California Coastal Commission, at which time the LCP will serve as the county's guideline for land use, public access and conservation decisions in the unincorporated area around Carmel.

Other draft plans that must be reviewed are the recreation and forestry segments.

The Citizens Advisory Committee meets at 7:30 p.m. tonight and Monday, Nov. 24 in Carmel City Hall.

She created her own career

By FLORENCE MASON

LIDIA SMITH SEGAL
Career Consultant

Lidia Smith Segal has created her own career.

In that sense, she is her own best client.

Ms. Segal's interests, experience and skills have evolved into an unusual business as a career consultant. Her goal with each client is to help him or her become aware of every possible combination that creates possibilities of employment. Work, as she defines it, is "doing something with your time and energy that matters."

She has been in that kind of work 14 years. However, it was along with other activities until earlier this year when she established her own offices in Monterey and Carmel, where she works by appointment. She is a limited partner in a new building project near the mouth of the Valley and looks forward to when she can occupy specially designed offices there.

The "other activities" included personnel work within companies and considerable experience in employment agencies. She also completed one year of law school to get a foundation in the legal aspects of employment. Before coming to the Peninsula nine years ago, she conducted "The Subject is You" in San Francisco, a forerunner of her present career counseling venture.

who's news
on the carmel business scene

What is different now, Ms. Segal said, is that instead of being a rescuer, her emphasis is on helping people find their own answers. Among the opportunities she offers her clients are contacts with people already well established in the client's field of interest.

Most of Ms. Segal's clients are men, although her brochures are designed to appeal to those who have not always taken work seriously: women, teen-agers, older adults, immigrants.

The creative approach Ms. Segal takes to the practical matter of employment is echoed in her other interests. She said, "I have a passion for poetry" and she has written and published verses under a pseudonym. Dancing is another of her special interests; she plans to be part of a dance group. Also of real interest: "Anything that has to do with authentic communication." However, her prevailing "hobby" remains being aware "of every possible combination that can create possibilities for employment."

Ms. Segal is married to podiatrist Alan Smith. The couple lives in Carmel and has a son, Scott.

TAROLA'S FINE GIFTS AND CANDLES
Hoyt and Karleen Tarola

"We retired 3½ years ago; we felt there was a need for a store of this kind in Carmel because we were tired of trying to find these kinds of things for ourselves."

"These kinds of things" include fine brass items, a special line of crystal, espresso and cappuccino sets in brass and copper, floral pieces made from silk flowers, decorator items and both traditional American-made and non-traditional candles. The Tarolas' candle line includes a French version in a range of 36 colors, (most lines, they said, offer a choice of about 20).

The owners of this new gift shop, in Stone House Terrace on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth, have a special interest in "being of service to local people." (Tourists are also welcome!) By way of service, Hoyt and Karleen Tarola offer a personal shopper program through which orders can be phoned in when the shopper is unable to get to the store. Delivery — at a minimum service charge — will be made either to the purchaser or to the recipient. The delivery service is free, and offered daily, to patients in local hospitals. Mrs. Tarola suggested silk flowers, in decorative containers, as a most welcome gift for a hospitalized friend. Those are unusual pieces made by a San Francisco area artist.

The Tarolas consider themselves local people, being "transplants from Oregon" 20 years ago. Before their so-called retirement, Tarola had been in the automobile business 37 years, and real estate had been among Mrs. Tarola's business interests. When asked if the couple has any children, she said, "A lot! All grown."

THE RUNNING IRON
Bob and Lisa Himelrick

Instead of hanging out at the Stirrup Cup, a Carmel Valley Village institution, residents and tourists can now enjoy family-style meals at its successor, The Running Iron restaurant.

The early California or western ambience is similar, but much has been added.

Bob and Lisa Himelrick know the restaurant business well. For 20 years Himelrick was director of customer relations for Pillsbury Foods and, more recently, was part owner of Straw Hat Pizza in Carmel Center. Mrs. Himelrick has been with Simpson's Restaurant in Carmel eight years; now she has joined her husband in this new venture.

The restaurant is at Carmel Valley Road and Via Contenta, the last commercial spot on the north side of the road in the Village.

The Himelricks' enthusiasm for things western and for good cooking is obvious when they talk about The Running Iron. "It's family-style, moderately priced food," Himelrick said. "Big hamburgers, luncheon specials, fish and chips, calamari. A house feature is barbecued spare ribs. You really should come out and see it as well as try out our great food!"

With a full liquor license, The Running Iron is open for lunch and dinner (from 11:30 a.m. to midnight). Cocktails start at 11 a.m.

The Himelricks have been in this area since 1970. They delight now in being only three minutes away from the restaurant. Their home is on Esquiline Road. There are two grown children: Mark, who works for a local contractor, and John, who has been working at the Rogue Restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf for six years. The family enjoys camping and travel when not cooking up western specials.

It may be that only deputy sheriffs would know what a "running iron" is. It's a form of branding iron used when some scoundrel wanted to change brands on cattle. Caught with one in his possession, a cowboy would be considered a rustler and hustled off to the nearest hoosegow.

SCHOLARSHIP

MICHAEL COLVIN, a senior, has won the Century III Leaders Scholarship competition at Carmel High School, according to Joe Feldeisen, Assistant Principal.

The 17-year-old is now eligible to compete with other high school seniors throughout California for two $1,500 scholarships, two $500 scholarships and a $10,000 national scholarship that will be awarded to a state winner. Students were judged on leadership, community involvement and a current events examination. To compete at the state level, Colvin must outline what he thinks is one of America's future challenges and how it should be met. Colvin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E.H. Colvin of Carmel Valley.

Lake San Antonio trout season to open

Trout season will open Nov. 26 at Lake San Antonio with an initial plant of 10,000 pounds of rainbow trout, according to county Department of Parks.

A total of 40,000 to 60,000 pounds of rainbows are planned to be added to Lake San Antonio, the department said. The stockings, ranging from 1,500 to 3,000 pounds each, will continue weekly through March 3, the department said.

A Winter Trout Derby will be held Dec. 1 to March 31. Prizes will be awarded monthly for the heaviest trout caught.

Fish and Game Codes apply. A fishing license and trout stamp must be in possession. Daily bag limit is five trout.

Special winter weekly camping rates are available for regular sites and for sites with water, electricity and sewer hookups. A $2 per car day use fee is charged for non-campers, and daily camping rates are $5.50 for regular sites and $7.50 for hookup sites. Boat rentals are available.

Lake San Antonio is in southern Monterey County 41 miles south of King City.

You owe your horse--and yourself-- the good life at Rancho Laureles

SOUND, PROFESSIONAL horse care begins with safe, comfortable accommodations and a high-quality feeding program at Rancho Laureles.

Our deluxe new barn offers the ultimate in luxury, safety and comfort. Each 12 x 12 box stall opens onto a securely fenced 24-foot paddock. Inside, all stalls have foot-cushioning rubber mats, automatic waterers and feeders. Stall fronts and sliding doors have heavy-gauge mesh so the horse benefits from good air circulation and seeing what's going on, while he is prevented from hanging his head over the door and possibly fussing with passing horses or people.

Walls between stalls are solid, so there's no rivalry with the horse next door. And all edges are reinforced with metal anti-chew strips. There's even a convenient blanket rack on each stall door.

Two spacious tack rooms are convenient to all stalls and offer individual tack lockers for each patron.

Of course, our old barn has a charm all its own, with oversized, exceptionally airy stalls and the same large adjoining paddocks. A large new wash rack with hot water to pamper your horse is right outside.

WHERE WE RIDE

Our two securely-fenced riding arenas offer excellent, well-drained sand footing. One measures 135 x 325 and is used for basic schooling as well as jumping. Our new 150 x 275 foot arena includes a regulation dressage court with plenty of room to spare!

And our 75-foot round lungeing arena is proving useful not only for lungeing, but for working green horses or beginning riders who profit from the secure surroundings.

The half-mile sand track that encircles our easterly fields is a perfect place to warm up a horse (or cool him out after a workout), leg up for an event or simply trot a few miles as good exercise.

Then there's Garland Park with its 541 acres of trails, plus the adjoining trails through to Robinson Canyon and the soon-to-be-opened new parkland to the east — a trailrider's paradise, uniquely beautiful every day of the year.

THE FINEST CARE

Now, more than ever, we believe that our feeding program pays off. Our 17% protein alfalfa hay cubes put weight on even rundown, skinny horses and keep it there.

We are also pleased to work with two of Monterey County's finest veterinarians and an excellent farrier, who all contribute to your horse's overall health and well-being.

LESSONS, ANYONE?

Whether you're just learning to post or have a specific problem over fences or in dressage, Doug Downing, our knowledgeable and very personable instructor, will come up with an answer.

He is available for private, semi-private or small group lessons on the flat or over fences.

GOOD COMPANY

One of the nicest things about Rancho Laureles is its relaxed, informal atmosphere. People tend to linger, and that makes us feel good, because it means they like it here. After a ride, they'll sit around, enjoy a cup of coffee or a soft drink and chat — mostly about horses, of course, but not always. Real friendships have grown among our riders.

But best of all, newcomers are made to feel genuinely welcome, whether they're nervous beginners or old pros. There's always a helping hand and a generous sprinkling of advice, and you feel you "belong" right from the start.

Seeing is believing. Why not drive out into the Carmel Valley sunshine to pay us a visit?

110 condos planned at CV Airport

By STEVE HELLMAN

AN OUT-OF-TOWN BUILDER has proposed a full-scale residential development with 110 condominiums on the Carmel Valley Airport.

A preliminary map for the Carmel Valley Views Condominiums was submitted to the county Planning Department Sept. 3. It calls for the 30-acre airport to be developed with 110 clustered condominium units, including 14 low- and moderate-income units, a series of lakes, tennis courts, par-course, barbecue areas and a neighborhood park.

The county Health Department, however, backed by the State Regional Water Quality Control Board, immediately raised questions over the suitability of the land for development.

Both agencies are concerned that the 110-unit development is not permissible in light of strict new standards for community septic tanks systems like that proposed.

GERALD BARRICK, a San Bruno lawyer, acquired a long-term option on the airport land earlier this year from Peter and Mary Delfino of Carmel Valley.

The airport was licensed in 1949. Barrick's proposal would be the first to develop the flat parcels bordered by Lupin and Lilac lanes, Poppy and Ford roads and Via Contenta.

Barrick said in a phone interview Nov. 17 that the option he acquired runs until July 1981, and that it is based on the potential for having the condominium project approved.

"We've got a nice-looking piece of property and a nice project," he said.

Asked about county and state agency concerns that the land is not suitable for septic tanks with the size project proposed, Barrick said he was considering other sewage disposal systems to meet the requirements.

THE COUNTY Planning Commission will review the preliminary map at some later date, and decide whether an Environmental Impact Report is needed. Any approval of the project, however, would have to await completion of the new Carmel Valley Master Plan, and the project would then have to compete with other projects in the Valley for an allocation of units.

The property, currently zoned R-1-B-2, is designated rural residential expansion in the proposed new Carmel Valley Master Plan. The designation would allow for a density up to four units per acre, while the proposed density is 3.06 units per acre.

The units would be clustered on 4.82 acres, with 22.5 acres left in open space and for recreation use, according to the plan prepared by architect Gene Takagawa of Monterey.

The proposed Master Plan states that the airport is a legal non-conforming land use in the residential neighborhood, and the use is considered acceptable provided the existing low level of service is not expanded.

"When the airport ceases operation," the Master Plan states, "the site shall be reserved for residential use at a density of one unit per net acre with the possibility of four units per net acre if suitable clustering is employed."

THE UPPER VALLEY Advisory Committee at its Sept. 15 meeting recommended that an Environmental Impact Report be prepared for the project.

It cited concerns over drainage, sewage disposal, air pollution and traffic.

The project would include extensions of Poppy Road and El Caminito.

The county Subdivision Committee at its Oct. 30 meeting reached a consensus that it opposed the project because of the proposed method of sewage disposal.

Mark Kostielney of the county Health Department advised the committee that the property was dense and could not support a community septic tank system.

Owen Stewart of the county Flood Control office also expressed concerns that drainage was not adequate.

THE REGIONAL Water Quality Control Board issued strict new standards in July for community septic tank systems in the Valley that would prohibit the project.

Kenneth Jones, executive director of the water board, noted in a letter to the county Oct. 29 that the new standards allow for only one septic system per one-half acre. Carmel Valley Views would have the equivalent of one system per one-quarter acre, or twice the density allowed by the state standards.

While his staff's review of the Carmel Valley Views project was only preliminay, Jones stated, "We recommend denial of any development having a density greater than one (septic) system per half acre or its equivalent."

Election charlatans

Dear Editor:

It seems high time that the pollsters be denounced as the political charlatans that the election results so often show them to be.

We should never forget those soothsayers of the liberal establishment looking squarely into the cameras and with straight faces insisting that the polls showed them clearly that the presidential race was just "too close to call."

Then Reagan landslides into office 483 to 49 in the electoral college, while conservative congressmen and senators all across the country added to the avalanche.

Really, a respectable race horse tout could have done better.

Big Sur gorge

Dear Editor:

Your paper published an article Sept. 18 entitled Big Sur gorge puts hikers to a real test.

The ranger staff of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park would like to express a note of caution.

While the gorge is a beautiful and rugged natural feature of the park, it is not an area recommended for most park users. Each year many park visitors are injured in the gorge due to its rough features. This season we have had several falling accidents. Visitors slip on the numerous boulders they must cross, spraining ankles and damaging knees. A large number of the accidents are serious and require medical attention.

Scaling the cliffs as described in the article has led to serious falls and people stranded asked for help. One loss of balance just weeks ago led a camper to an unplanned trip to a medical facility. After sliding approximately 10 feet, the camper fell over a five-foot ledge and landed knee first on the rocks below.

The ruggedness of the surrounding terrain has even worn dogs to exhaustion.

For those reasons, the park has installed warning signs at the beginning of the gorge that state, "Hazardous Area — Steep Cliffs and Loose Rocks."

It should also be mentioned that no camping is allowed in the gorge area for both fire control and sanitation reasons. Camping is available year round in our main campground.

Thank you for letting us explain the safety side of the issue.

Sounds of childhood

By VIRGINIA (RAY) GEOGHEGAN

I REMEMBER THE TREES swaying in the wind, bending over and, in my mind, almost touching the ground.

I was afraid they were going to break and fall on our roof. I would pull the covers over my head and try to shut out the sounds of the pounding surf, trees scraping against our house and the howling wind.

Storms were to be remembered at Point Lobos.

Rain would pelt the tin roof, making the storm sound worse than it really was. My mother, sister and I would try to comfort and cheer each other until father came home. Once he was home we felt safe again. He would protect us from the storm. We were together, inside looking out.

The storm would pass and in the calm of the day I would be amazed that I could have been so frightened the night before. I would think, "What a sissy you are. There isn't anything to be afraid of."

In the sunlight of the morning all things were new again. The trees and bushes were cleansed of accumulated dust. Little animals of the forest would be gathering what the storm had uncovered; trees that had fallen to the fierce wind would be spraying the air with the pine fragrance that companies try to capture in aerosol cans today.

IN THE CALMNESS I could sense the power of the spirit that could turn the sky from blue to black, move the ocean in giant swells, make rain come from the sky that would flood our road.

I knew in my heart that power was strong and awesome, fearful. And I would hear the chatter of the squirrels in the forest, see the birds picking up the newly-uncovered food, and I would see the baby deer see me. We would watch each other and I would know, in their eyes the spirit was also a loving spirit.

China Cove at Point Lobos in 1948.

Skipping over the mud puddles on my way to school, I would think, "Oh there is nothing as great as this day."

I loved the new, clean feeling. I was glad the storm was over. I had lived through another storm. My fear was past and I, like the day, was calm. Within minutes I would forget all those feelings as I bounced into the day — my first-grade friends, teacher, Dick and Jane — until now, as I experience them again, 30 years later.

Now THAT'S Carmel!

Vote on library is clarified

By BARNEY LAIOLO

I WOULD LIKE TO CLARIFY my position regarding my negative vote on the purchase of the library lot.

Please understand that I am not anti-library. I feel we have an excellent library and it serves the community well. My vote reflects my opinion of the way the purchase was accomplished.

I believe the public would have been better served if a town hall or general meeting open to the public had taken place prior to the closing of negotiations. In such a meeting the public would have been informed of the exact needs, the relative total investment of taxpayers' dollars and the operating costs for maintenance and personnel that would be required. At that meeting, also, input from the public might have divulged other possible solutions which could have been considered.

My feeling is that the cart is somewhat getting ahead of the horse. It must be remembered that, legally, an environmental impact report must be done to determine if this use of the site is compatible with the surrounding area. To be considered are the surrounding uses (i.e., present zoning of this and adjacent properties), traffic flow, parking, etc. I believe that those items should have been dealt with first.

I believe that before progressing too rapidly with plans that a possible joint venture with the owners of the Pine Inn should be explored to see if a dual use of parking areas could be accomplished. A public restroom with outside access on this site should be considered as well.

I am one who happens to believe that the public should be kept informed of the expenditures and proposed plans for the use of city money.

I hope I have made my position clear.

THE NEXT MAJOR PROJECT to which I hope to devote considerable time will be the use of the Dolores and Fifth property to locate housing for the elderly.

As expressed in the last vote of approximately 2-to-1 in favor of using this location for this purpose, I feel encouraged to devote whatever time necessary to see this a completed endeavor.

Please feel certain I will do my best to keep the public informed of the progress in these deliberations.

WE HAVE HAD our third meeting with the parties interested in forming a recreational program.

I am very happy to report that the interest and the hard work accomplished to date, dealing mostly with statistics and needs, have been very rewarding. Isn't it fortunate that the dedicated people working to put this plan in a presentable form are residents with plenty of savvy? It shouldn't be too long before we will be having a town meeting to present to the public the various plans being considered.

OUR NEW city clerk, Mrs. Jean Kettelkamp, started with us Nov. 17, and I feel that her presence will do much to help us expedite some of our city projects.

I welcome her aboard and look forward to great accomplishments.

WE HAVE JUST COMPLETED some work at the police station and the corporation yard regarding emergency lighting and power.

This work accomplishes a very important function in the event of power failure by furnishing stand-by electricity from a generator to keep those two very necessary branches of our government in operation. You may have forgotten that this building on Junipero and Fourth is the only building in town with a disaster shelter.

Enough for now . . .

Wear your smile; I do!
Mayor Barney

P.S. Happy Thanksgiving to all.

Dancers bring Isadora Duncan legacy to Carmel

The Dionysian Duncan Dancers will present a legacy of dances from the repertoire of Isadora Duncan to the music of Chopin, Brahms, Schubert, Gluck and Strauss Saturday, Nov. 22 at 8 p.m. at Sunset Theatre, Carmel. Everyone is invited.

The dancers have existed independently as the performing company of the Isadora Duncan International Institute of Classical Dance since 1977. They have performed as original members of the San Francisco Duncan Dancers since 1972. During the last six years they have identified the distinctive and contrasting styles within Duncan technique. Today, they have a repertoire which reveals the entire spectrum of this work.

Members of the company have studied directly with Maria-Theresa Duncan and Irma Duncan, two of the six proteges of Isadora, as well as with students of Anna and Lisa Duncan. This association included ongoing master classes with Irma Duncan during her last years as well as five months of instruction from Maria-Theresa Duncan in preparation for four New York City performances.

The company maintains a strong bond with the Duncan family through Isadora's niece, Ligoa Duncan, as their continued participation is considered vital to any true and lasting account of this art. As a result of this mutual commitment, the Isadora Duncan International Institute of Classical Dance has been established in order to guarantee the preservation of an art form which has struggled to survive.

The company has performed throughout northern California and members have performed as guest artists in New York and Paris. They have also participated in University master classes and seminars. In the past year, the Dionysian Dancers have given three performances at the California Historical Society in San Francisco.

The Isadora Duncan International Institute is responsible for instruction, currently available throughout the San Francisco Bay Area and for the maintenance of The Duncan Library in Paris.

It is the goal of the Institute and performing company to maintain and develop Isadora Duncan's unique contribution to the art of dance.

"The five young and lovely dancers of the company, Christina Berggren, Jean Farr, Nancy Isham, Deborah Vaernes and Maria Villazan-Ruiz danced with the natural, supple grace of movement one associates with Isadora," writes Dick Moore of Marin Scope after their performance at the California Historical Society last June. "The effect of their dancing isn't the least bit musty or museum-y — as one might understandably fear."

Tickets are $5 general and $3.50 students and seniors, available at the door.

For further information, phone 1-(415) 346-1530.

Noted waterfowl artist to open exhibit today

A one-man show of waterfowl paintings by Gerald Petitt, a wildlife artist from Oregon, opens Thursday, Nov. 20 at The Decoy Gallery and Gift Shop in Carmel Plaza.

Everyone is invited to attend two evening receptions, Thursday, Nov. 20 and Saturday, Nov. 22, from 7-10 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Petitt will be at the gallery through Nov. 23.

A native of Iowa, Petitt received his schooling in Southern California, and made his home in Oregon after serving in the Air Force during World War II.

Self-taught as an artist, Petitt developed much of his knowledge of birds from study and research in the Klamath Lake area, a stopover for millions of migrating waterfowl. He has won many awards for his work.

"I hope to increase awareness of nature through my paintings," Petitt says. "I am concerned not only with the spectacular and dramatic, but with the quiet and peaceful beauty of a marsh or stream bank."

The gallery is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. For further information, phone 625-1881.

Documentary film 'Yugoslavia' to be screened

Yugoslavia, a two-hour color film on the exotic land often deemed a world crossroads, will be screened Thursday and Friday, Nov. 20-21 at 8:15 p.m. at Sunset Center Theater, Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel.

Frank Klicar, a professional travel documentary film producer, will narrate the film, a part of the Explorama series.

Klicar recently returned from his fifth filming trip in Yugoslavia, and traveled over 10,000 miles during the production of the film.

"Most important to me," says Klicar, "is the filming of people and getting a feeling of their life styles. I have a sequence in the film showing life in a typical Yugoslav farming village. I concentrate on one farm family and I show them doing their daily tasks, which include an amazing display of strudel-making and a three-day engagement party."

Klicar, who is Yugoslav by descent, filmed in all six republics of the country — Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Serbia, Montenegro and Macedonia. Because of his ancestral background, many doors to the real behind-the-scenes Yugoslavia opened for him.

What was his most memorable experience in Yugoslavia? "It would be difficult to pick just one," Klicar relates. "However, the people of Yugoslavia have always been the most interesting and delightful people I have ever encountered. During my most recent trip, last August and September, it was fascinating to see the changes that have occurred since the death of Tito."

Reserved seat tickets, at $4.85, are available at Macy's in Del Monte Shopping Center, and at Abinante Music Store in Monterey, 372-5893.

Tickets are also available at the theater on the night of the performance.

Everyone is invited to attend. For further information, phone 1-415-771-4733.

Sunset Views

The dance, films and yoga at Sunset Center

By RICHARD TYLER

ON SATURDAY, Nov. 22 at 8 p.m., an interesting dance company, The Dionysian Duncan Dancers will make its first appearance at Sunset Theater.

The group has existed independently as the performing company of the Isadora Duncan International Institute of Classical Dance since 1977 after performing as original members of the San Francisco Duncan dancers since 1972. During the last six years the group has identified the distinctive and contrasting styles within Duncan technique. Today, it is fortunate to have a repertoire which reveals the entire spectrum of this work.

Members of the company have studied directly with Maria-Theresa Duncan and Irma Duncan, two of the six proteges of Isadora, as well as with students of Anna and Lisa Duncan. This association included master classes with Irma during her last years as well as five months of instruction from Maria-Theresa in preparation for four New York City performances.

The company maintains a strong bond with the Duncan family through Isadora's niece, Ligoa Duncan, as their continued participation is considered vital to any true and lasting account of this art. As a result of this mutual commitment, The Isadora Duncan International Institute of Classical Dance has been established to guarantee the preservation of an art form which has struggled to survive.

The Dionysian Duncan Dancers give a popular annual recital to commemorate the birthday of Isadora, born in San Francisco May 27, 1877. The company has performed throughout northern California, and members have performed as guest artists in New York and Paris. They have also participated in University master classes and seminars. In the past months, the Dionysian Duncan Dancers gave three performances at the California Historical Society in San Francisco.

The Duncan Institute is responsible for instruction, currently available throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, and for the maintenance of the Duncan Library in Paris. It is the goal of the Institute and performing company to maintain and develop Isadora Duncan's unique contribution to the art of dance for now and for future generations.

The Dionysian Duncan Dancers will present a legacy of dances from the repertoire of Isadora Duncan to the music of Chopin, Brahms, Schubert, Gluck and Strauss in the Sunset Theater, Saturday, Nov. 22 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 general admission and $3.50 for students and seniors, available at the door.

ON THURSDAY and Friday, Nov. 20 and 21, Explorama will present the first major new film of the diverse country called Yugoslavia.

An exciting new talent, Frank Klicar, presents his film of a country with many surprises: amazing prosperity, Old World charm, fairyland of waterfalls and clear lakes and friendly people. It is a Socialist country emerging as a major Western tourist area. There will be some tickets available at the box office the nights of performance.

ON THURSDAY, Nov. 20 at the Brown Bag Cinema we will present The City.

A masterpiece of dynamic visuals and rapid-fire editing combined with a marvelous Aaron Copland musical score make it one of the great documentary attempts to show extreme contrasts between New York, the slums of Pittsburgh and old New England Americana.

The second film will be The Hymn of the Nations. Reportedly the only complete film record of a Toscanini performance, Hymn was photographed with careful technical arrangements to honor the maestro's edict that there be no movie camera at any time within his view.

Before the showing of those two films in Leonard Carpenter Hall at 1 p.m., you can bring a brown bag lunch and join us in the Chapman Room. Sunset Center provides the coffee. Here is a chance to revive an old-fashioned spirit of community and neighborliness. A chance to renew old friendships and make new ones. Come at noon, share your brown bag and then move down to Carpenter Hall for the films. No reservations or tickets are required.

THE CENTRAL COAST Art Association meeting will be held Nov. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 10.

The guest artist will be Harold E. Holly, who will give a demonstration of his watercolor technique.

Holly has offered to critique watercolors. The public is encouraged to participate in this demonstration and submit watercolors that are matted, but not framed. Holly will then place a sheet of acetate on top and show you what correction, if any, he would make to enhance the painting.

A NEW SERIES OF hatha yoga classes is being offered at Sunset Center.

The classes are taught by Paula Rosen, a Peninsula resident who, for the last six years, has studied yoga, dance and other body disciplines. Last summer she completed a teacher training course with Swami Satchidananda at the Integral Yoga Institute in Pomfret Center, Conn. She has been working on her B.A. in psychology at Sonoma State University and is completing her degree at Antioch College West, where she is doing research and writing on the mind/body connection in preparation for work in dance therapy. Her interest in yoga as well as dance led her to the study of the body as a tool for integration, enabling the psyche to experience joy and expansion on many levels.

Class instruction is focused on basic postures, breathing exercises and concentration techniques. You may still join the class currently meeting in the Bingham Room on Thursday evenings from 6 to 7:15 p.m. For more information, call Ms. Rosen at 625-5407.

NOW HERE is a Festival!

Miami, Fla., has announced a New World Contemporary Festival of the Arts, with a $1.5 million budget, to take place in June. Sir Rudolf Bing, former manager of New York's Metropolitan Opera, is executive director of the festival. A board of 48 artists-advisers — including Leonard Bernstein, Richard Rogers, Samuel Barber, Edward Albee and Rudolf Nureyev — will help select works to be presented. The festival expects to premiere one full-length opera, three plays, a piece of musical theater, ballets, chamber music and symphonic pieces.

Meanwhile, in the Federal Republic of Germany through Nov. 22, there will be an amateur theater festival. A holiday Folk Fair is being held in Milwaukee through Nov. 23.

Word wizard Tael Thomas to perform at Cherry Hall

Tael Thomas will present a show of poetry, dance, music and drama Friday, Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. in Cherry Hall, Gaudalupe and Fourth, Carmel. The word wizard and rhapsodist, a retired lecturer in Ancient Greek and Philosophy, titles his show Alcibiades and the Last Act of Athens.

Thomas is a poet from the Bay Area who has performed over the last five years, reciting his own work, combined with that of Yeats, Lorca, Crane and others. He chants, tells tall tales and stories, sometimes using ancient and foreign languages.

A one-time professor of philosophy at Cabrillo College, Thomas has lived in Hawaii, Jamaica and other exotic locales, but he now makes his home in Palo Alto while he pursues his career of present-day rhapsodist and exponent of the oral traditions.

His performance creates "an environmental totality where poetry becomes dance and music and the drama of poetic language seems perfectly at home on the theatrical stage," writes a critic from Santa Cruz Matrix in 1977.

Thomas most recently lent his special brand of theatre to the Vorpol Gallery, San Francisco, in Halfway to Infinity by Gordon Wagner, and was featured in the First International Sound Poetry Festival as La Mamelle.

Wine, coffee and goodies will be served. Admission is $2.50. Questions and discussion after the performance are welcome.

Reservations are requested. For more information and reservations, phone 624-7491.

Hand-crocheted fashion preview

A special showing of hand-crocheted designs by Lucy de Marchant will be previewed Saturday, Nov. 22 from noon-4 p.m. at Coover Clothing, in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend the event and meet the designer.

Owner of an exclusive shop in Marina, de Marchant has earned a roster of private clients in both San Francisco and Las Vegas with her extraordinary talents.

Every one of the designer's garments is an unduplicated work of art. One of three winners of the San Francisco Contemporary Design Contest, she produces silk crochet sweaters and dresses that are examples of perfection of a highly-skilled craft. The workmanship is impeccable.

All of de Marchant's designs are crocheted by hand in multiple strands of silk threads, which she dyes herself. Much thought is given to each sweater or dress crocheted.

"I do not look at fashion as if it were a uniform. What is important to me is that my customers do what's right for them and their particular lifestyle," said de Marchant.

Coover Clothing is the only California shop other than Lucy de Marchant's Marina location to carry the designer's creations.

Theatre review:

'Leonardo' holds up very well

By MARC RIVETTE

LEONARDO DA VINCI was a man to capture the imagination. Certainly he did Marcia Hovick's, and, as I understand it, when she was only seventeen years of age. For that is how old she was when she wrote her play, Leonardo.

It holds up very well. There is a fine ring of poetry in her lines, though it is not a play in verse.

Perhaps the most complete shock is the stage at the Forest Theatre in the Ground. For those of you were used to everything being played in the crackerbox of a stage, you are in for a pleasant moment of disbelief. Through I know not what alchemy — and the play will leave you open to such thoughts — a stage of depth and arches has been created that seems to go on for miles.

And the lighting, which has always been, at best, rudimentary, has been turned over to the sure hands of Lance Jacobsen and Carey Crockett. Now there is a whole gamut of lighting techniques. They range from sunlight to dusk, and there is even an ingenious way of projecting the drawings of Leonardo on a screen that serves well as breaks between scenes. You have to see the changes for yourself.

THE ACTION BEGINS with the marriage of The Duke of Milan, Lodovico Sforza, and the young D'Este princess, Beatrice. The duke is a pushover for a pretty face, but thanks to the costumes of the day, we never get to see what the sight of a well-turned ankle might do to him. There is intrigue, both political as well as sexual, and through it all, Leonardo weaves as the court genius.

The roles were played by most of the regulars of the Staff Players. Among old favorites were Thomas Sanchez, who plays the jester-dwarf, Frittala. He reached a new high in make-up and deformed shape, hurling himself around the stage with only the use of his hands and one leg. All in all, quite a tour de force.

The other outstanding role was Andy Philpot's Lothario, the Emissary, who arrives from Isabella to try to lure Leonardo to her court. Lothario has taken quite a few too many at the banquet, and Philpot's acting of him drunk was one of the high points of the evening. He is constantly gaining in power and scope.

JOHN BRADY played Rosate, the astrologer and court physician. He represents the struggle between the old ways of thinking as opposed to the new, clear scientific-investigative thinking of Leonardo, played by Skip Kadish.

Leslie Robinson, as Lucretia, the lady-in-waiting who has caught Lodovico's eye, was decorative and begins to show that there is power underneath.

One of the most powerful characters in the drama is Jamie Aberdeen's Beatrice. Her influence upon the court was tremendous.

THE REST OF the large cast did creditably under the direction of Ramie Wikdahl. That it was an entertaining evening seems, to me, to be made clear by the fact that I did not find the captain's chair seats as hard and uncomfortable as they have been in the past. So, it is the play, not new seats, that makes the audience enjoy themselves. Well done!

Leonardo plays Friday through Sunday, Nov. 21-23 at 8 p.m. at Carmel's Indoor Forest Theater.

Tickets are $4.50 general and $2.50 students and seniors. For reservations and further information, phone the theater at 6245-1531.

Seashore class for children Nov. 22-23

Introduction to tidepools, shore birds and common seashore plants and animals will be offered.

Participants should bring a child from ages 5-10 with which to share the experience. Sneakers and warm beach clothes should be worn and binoculars and a snack for lunch should be brought.

Fee for the course is $42. In case of rain, the first class sessions will meet at Monterey Peninsula College, Room A-9, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

Everyone is invited to attend. Participants are encouraged to phone 1-429-2351 to pre-register. Registration will also be taken the day of the class.

CHECKING-WITH-INTEREST

SHARE DRAFTS: The checking account of tomorrow that's HERE TODAY.

Share drafts are what we call checking accounts that pay interest. Whereas banks and savings and loans can only begin offering their version of these new checking accounts beginning next January, Monterey Federal Credit Union has dividend-earning share draft accounts available NOW!

In fact, we were the first on the scene with interest-earning checking when we introduced share drafts to our members over two years ago! In the time since, share drafts have proved to be one of our most popular services, combining the simplicity, freedom from restrictions, and earning power that no other checking account can match. See Why:

- Just like checks: Share drafts look like checks, work like checks, and are accepted everywhere like checks. Unlike checks, however, we don't return cancelled drafts to you at the end of the month. Instead, you write carbonless copies. It makes record-keeping easier and KEEPS COSTS DOWN.
- Service-free: Share draft accounts feature NO MONTHLY SERVICE CHARGE and NO MINIMUM BALANCE-period. Only ONE type of share draft account for EVERYONE.
- Earn dividends: Share draft account holders earn 7% annual dividends, compounded quarterly, on their low balance. With no service charges to worry about, any share draft dividends are NET PROFIT. In fact, Monterey Federal Credit Union posted over $40,000 in dividends to 2,400 share draft accounts, or about $17 per account, from July to September 1980.
- Overdraft protection: Share draft accounts feature overdraft protection, up to $5,000 maximum, for members who qualify. It's an attractive option for those occasional times you need to write a draft for more than your balance.
- Direct deposit to your account: Whether you earn a paycheck or receive a monthly social security or retirement check, you'll enjoy the extra security and convenience of having your money deposited directly into your share draft account.
- $50 will open a share draft account: All it takes to open a share draft account is a $50 deposit and membership in the credit union.

COMPARE AND SAVE: Compare other checking accounts being offered that pay interest.

Do their initial deposit requirements, service charges, and minimum balance restrictions mean that you'd still end up paying for your checking account rather than collecting the interest? Theater review:

'On the Air' is full of nostalgia and enthusiasm

By MARC RIVETTE

THE WHARF THEATER'S On The Air is a natural for all nostalgia buffs, for all enthusiasts for pre-television radio broadcasting, and for those who like to see young talent having a ball on stage.

The play/revue is the result of a collaboration of Misters DiGirolamo, Hulse and Maxfield, and the Ms. Ito and McInich. The latter name is the only one that is not mentioned either in the cast or the production staff on the program.

The scene is the broadcasting studio of radio station WIRE atop the San Carlos Hotel, overlooking Monterey Bay. The time is two days in May, 1945. The nightly audience becomes the "studio audience" of the radio station. It is a small station, for the engineer is also the sound-effects man, the applause-cue man for the audience and the general factotum.

ALAN McGUIRE, as Jimmy the engineer, sets up the studio chairs, checks the live mikes, and assembles his props, including a pair of ladies' shoes. One of the hilarious scenes is when he removes his clumsy brogans and gets into the pumps for the sound of feminine footsteps. There is no way that the audience will believe that they will fit, but they do.

The cast slowly assembles in a very offhand manner, waiting for their cues to take their turn at the mike. In the background, they chat among themselves, well knowing that they are out of the range of the live microphones. All in all, they behave, in those radio broadcasting days, in a way that would drive a TV producer, with an all-seeing camera, up the wall. It makes for the gentle fun of the old radio broadcast days.

The first act has the barest of plot lines: a young hopeful arrives for an audition. A singer enters, trying to select the most desirable career — love or singing — and walks out, allowing the young hopeful, Linda, played by Alicia Welch, to wow us all at the first curtain.

The first act also introduces "Salinas Slim" or "Cowboy Bill," a hip-slinger who sings to the ladies, and to the little cowboys and cowgirls out in radio land. Kelly Saunders, Diane Trovato and Lyn Whiting make up a sort of Monterey Andrews Sisters trio, and those girls really throw themselves into pitching a song or a singing commercial.

There is also an episode from a continuing mystery drama, which went on too long for my taste, yet it did show the versatility of the radio performers of those days. The rest of the act is devoted to the popular songs of that day.

THE SECOND ACT bothers even less with plot. There is Rex Maxfield's half-hearted attempt at becoming an alcoholic over the loss of his job. It is half-hearted, because he drinks only a third of a pint before swearing off under the help of Linda, the young wow of the first act.

The rest of the act is merely a concert of some 31 numbers sung by various members of the cast. Of special note were the Brewster Sisters, both ensemble and individual numbers. Instances that delighted the audience were Lyn Whiting's My Heart Belongs To Daddy, complete with short fur coat, and Diane Trovato's Oh Johnny.

Gina Welch sang several numbers, reaching a high point in her Ten Cents A Dance, although the two-man ballet, though a good idea, could have been a little less half-hearted, or cut.

Rex Maxfield has a good, pleasant baritone voice, but once was a little bit forced on the forte part. The Fort Ord Five, as they were called in the script, were not listed by name in the program, but were an excellent live ensemble of musicians that provided pace and impetus to the whole performance. The only one listed was Barney Julse as Sgt. Danny Daniels, who has a light, pleasant singing voice.

THIS IS A LIKEABLE musical review, loaded with nostalgia and enthusiasm. What holds it together is the pace. There is no hesitation, and number follows number like clockwork, only pausing to allow the audience their applause, which they gleefully gave after each number.

If you fall into any of the three categories listed at the beginning of this review, or if you enjoy cabaret-type entertainment, this one is for you.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

SHOULD YOU RESIGN?

Black, on roll in the diagrammed position, doubles. Should you, White, accept or resign?

Resign. Success depends only on which side can get off first. Cleverness won't help you.

If there is no waste, Black gets off by rolling a total of 75 points; you need 87 points. Conventional wisdom is that you may accept a double if you are behind less than 15 per cent of what the doubler needs (just under 12 points).

You would have a marginal take if your men were well distributed in your board, but in this case you are not only slightly more than 15 per cent behind but also have a decidedly inferior position.

If you must throw your money away, give it to charity or to your favorite backgammon columnist. Don't take doubles like this.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

The wine connoisseur

Domestic wines appropriate for Thanksgiving

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

WORD REACHED us in Houston Nov. 6 that President-elect Ronald Reagan had selected the Jordan Vineyard & Winery 1976 Alexander Valley Cabernet Sauvignon to pour for the celebration of his election with his family and those most closely associated with the victorious campaign.

Once more we have been on the road with a group of California winemakers, visiting Dallas, San Antonio, New Orleans, Memphis, Houston and concluding this whirlwind tour of seminars in Southern cities in Miami. The cast of our missionary California wine road show has included Eric Wente, Rod Strong of Sonoma Vineyards, Michael Mondavi, Steve Mirassou and Michael Rowan, the winemaster and general manager of the youngest of the wineries represented, Jordan Vineyard & Winery of Healdsberg.

We are happy to report that the response to our seminars and tastings has exceeded our expectations. Some of American industry has been experiencing less-than-hoped-for sales graphs, but the movement of California wines has been steadily increasing since the wine boom of the '70s. It may have slowed down somewhat, but it's still on the rise. More and more people everywhere are finding that the whole spectrum of California wines, from the least expensive to the rare small winery treasures, remain the best values to be found, seldom, if ever, disappointing.

FROM THE MOMENT of its recent debut, the Jordan 1976 Alexander Valley Cabernet Sauvignon has had wine-lovers in total agreement about its charms.

Though in national distribution, quantities are limited; distributors, even in large metropolitan areas, are on an allocation basis.

Not to worry. There are other wonderful editions of the Cabernet Sauvignon grape to be found: Sonoma Vineyards 1976 Alexander's Crown Cabernet Sauvignon, Mirassou Special Harvest 1977 Monterey Country Cabernet Sauvignon and the Robert Mondavi 1977 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon, all of which have been delighting those good wine-lovers we've been meeting on our travels.

We brought along a letter to answer from one of our readers in Edgewood, Ky. She writes: "Would you be kind enough to give me some help in choosing a wine for our Thanksgiving turkey dinner? I would like neither a too expensive wine, nor a too low-priced one. We plan on having champagne with our appetizers. Is this a no-no? I do want a nice time as this is our granddaughter's first birthday. Thank you for your help. — M.B.R."

"What wine for Thanksgiving?" is the most constant question to come before any wine adviser as certainly as frost comes on the pumpkin. It is not difficult to answer. Champagne is certainly not a "no-no" for pre-prandial appetizer service, nor, for that matter, to continue right on through the dinner. As Thanksgiving is a thoroughly American tradition, it follows that an American wine or wines become equally appropriate. We would advise our reader, and anyone else to whom wine selection for the turkey dinner seems to be a problem, to consult the best local wine merchant.

Roast turkey, like roast chicken, has both light and dark meat, and diners who have preference. With the traditional menu of yams, green vegetables, cranberry sauce and all the trimmings, sometimes a shrimp cocktail to begin, or soup, champagne from California or New York becomes the natural beginning.

For those who most enjoy either the dark meat or the hopefully juice-laden slices of breast meat, California's finest red wine, of Cabernet Sauvignon, is an ideal selection.

Brother Timothy of Christian Brothers, cellarmaster for 45 years, taught us years and years ago that the white meat of poultry becomes one of the finest backdrops for showing off the aromatic richness of red wines. And sparkling wines, with their bubbly of carbon dioxide threading through white wine, often ameliorate the richness of a turkey and gravy dinner.

We've already nominated several moderately priced Cabernet Sauvignon wines above, and we'll suggest the Sonoma Vineyards California Champagne Cuvee 113 Brut ($10). The wine is dry, crisp, clean, appetizing, a blend of Chardonnay, Pinot Blanc and Pinot Noir grapes, the elegance from bottle fermentation in classic methode champenoise tradition. Should that dinner begin with smoked salmon, the California Champagne is a thoroughly delightful selection.

If our answers to our reader's request seem to be a little non-specific, the bottom-line advice remains to consult your finest local wine merchant. It is his primary responsibility to be familiar with his inventory of good wines, and temper his choice with the more exact details of the menu with which the wines are to be served.

The reader asked for a "not too low-priced" wine. We would presume because this will be a family celebration, even though the youngest member may not be partaking of the wine, the choice or choices should delight all the guests. Because of this, we would offer that this once-a-year holiday dinner should be a multiple wine service, offering each guest his choice of red or white wine.

WHICH BRINGS US to a still white wine to offer with the Cabernet Sauvignon as the alternate selection.

California's finest white wine is Chardonnay. The Mirassou Special Harvest 1978 Sonoma County River West Chardonnays ($8) are delightfully rich, golden, dry and outstanding wines. Those not being available, Chardonnays from Chateau St. Jean, Spring Mountain, Robert Mondavi, Beringer, Keenan, Zaca Mesa are among the finest.

We'll conclude this Thanksgiving suggestion column with a first course notion we learned from Tony Vallone of Tony's award-winning restaurant in Houston: small cornucopias of prosciutto ham filled with a mousse of Bosc pears garnished with slices of kiwi fruit — beautiful and appetizing, great with any of the above wines, especially champagne!

THE RUSSIANS ARE COMING

At 6'7" Peter The Great was a giant among men and a giant among rulers. Rhodes Scholar Robert K. Massie - who wrote Nicholas and Alexandra - has produced this magnificent biography which will become the definitive work on Peter.

Massie's wife Suzanne has just published Land of the Firebird which is richly illustrated sweeping history from the time of the chronicles to the outbreak of the revolution. The art, the culture, and the people are all there. Highly readable.

Schubert recital at Sunset Center: an excellent realization by a master

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

IN THE WINTER of 1827 Franz Schubert penned the first 12 songs in a cycle of 24 that he would collectively call Die Winterreise.

The verses had recently been published and were the work of Wilhelm Mueller, whom Schubert had already set in the famous Die Schoene Muellerin cycle.

In 1827 Schubert was already ill. The insidious raves of syphillis would end his life at age 31 late the following year. In that time the dying Beethoven was made aware of Schubert's music and remarked on it in glowing terms. Schubert visited Beethoven twice, though in the second the older musician was too sick to speak.

The appeal of Mueller's poems to Schubert is clear. The metrical lines kindled the composer's sense of melody without hesitation. (Schubert is said to have composed six of the Winterreise songs in one morning.) And the subject also strongly appealed. In both sets the first-person protagonist is set to wandering in search of self and solice by love for a distant young woman. In Schoene Muellerin she is clearly identified and stimulates a range of specific emotions and reactions that at least remain youthful and impetuous.

But in Die Winterresise, A Winter's Journey, the loved one is more general and the way is more lonely, more reflective, more resigned.

In songs of farewell, tears, snow, ice, cold; in songs of barking dogs and of crows, Schubert sings gently without breastbeating. This is the songwriter Schubert at his most rare, his most introspective. And still this is the Schubert of the strophic song, the musical imagery and the classical balance.

The recital of those lieder by Hermann Prey at Sunset Theater last Thursday was not only an excellent realization by a consummate master, but paid definitive deference to the songs themselves. Prey gave the large audience the best of both worlds: a sensitive and thoughtful discourse undisturbed by any technical deficiency (or even intermission) and a clearly revealing glimpse into the restless and lonely soul of Schubert.

Prey's fame as a lieder singer was utterly justified in this concert. His voice production ranged from deeply resonating bass tones to clear, bright highs. His legato line and phrasing were the essence of "beautiful singing." He exhibited no noticeable physical preparations for the many difficulties and challenges of this demanding style, but sang with ease with grace, with urgency and restraint. While his bearing was aristocratic, there was nothing precious or self-conscious in his manner. Gone was that art-for-art's-sake characteristic that occasionally flavors the lieder singing of Prey's great colleague, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau. Prey approached his task with grave deliberateness as though it were something he needed to do. His attention to the text and character of each song was well considered and never unclear. This was no mere entertainment; this was important.

HIS ACCOMPANIST, Michael Krist, had the great advantage of a Boesendorfer Imperial grand piano.

The instrument displayed uncanny clarity of speech at the quietest levels and its bass tones were not the least woolly for all their richness. Krist provided Prey with deft support, though at times could justifiably have been a more equal partner. In any event he was never less than a first-rate supporting member with excellent control of his instrument.

The Carmel Music Society, which sponsored Prey's appearance, can be most proud of this outstanding performance.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM 97.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Good food thrown away is the American way

By The REV. LARRY FARRELL

A Romanian farmer was invited by our State Department to visit the United States.

He was shown modern farms and factories, saw skyscrapers and made trips to the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone and Yosemite. When he was leaving Kennedy Airport, a reporter asked him what impressed him most about the U.S.A. and he replied, "the size of your garbage cans."

At the end of World War II, I was chaplain to a German prisoner-of-war camp near Norfolk. It had been built as a U.S. Army camp, and when the American Army was there, the Englishman who had the garbage contract fed half the county with good food thrown away. It became a British camp and the garbage fed pigs. When it became a German prisoner-of-war camp there was no garbage. Everything was used, including the potato peelings. Tin cans were made into picture frames and Christmas decorations.

Today our currency is deflated, the pound is weak and the German mark is strong.

I wonder why?

Amen

COLD SPELL STRIKES VILLAGE

Carmel shivered and shook, while the home fires were kept burning all day and all night as it experienced one of the coldest Novembers in years.

But it wasn't as cold as it sometimes gets in Carmel. Dr. Ferdinand Haasis, of the Carmel Coastal Laboratory, will tell of a day in January in 1922 when the mercury took a record drop and stopped at 22 degrees.

This week, the coldest day was on a Wednesday morning with a temperature of 37 degrees.

NEW SCENIC HIGHWAY CONNECTS CARMEL AND PACIFIC GROVE

Carmel and Pacific Grove, brought together within a ten-minute distance by the new direct highway which was recently opened, had a dinner dance in honor of those instrumental in securing the appropriation for construction of the road Thursday night at Asilomar.

VILLAGE 'BLACKSMITH' FORSAKES LAW PRACTICE

John Catlin, the village blacksmith, was a prominent attorney in San Francisco.

He came to Carmel on a visit, gave one look around, and next week his office was vacant.

GERT MUSER IN CONCERT AT SUNSET CENTER

Gert Muser, operatic baritone, will be presented in concert Friday night at 8:30 o'clock at Sunset Auditorium.

Prior to coming to this country, Mr. Muser devoted his entire time to singing in the leading opera houses of Europe.

BOY SCOUTS SUE FOR PROPERTY

Principals in the dispute over what's going to happen to Carmel's Boy Scout House apparently will meet this month to attempt to reach a decision — although no one's sure yet when the meeting will take place.

The Boy Scouts have sued the Legion and city for ownership of the Mission and Eighth property.

Ownership of the building became an issue after many years of Legion trusteeship when the Legion recently lost its tax exempt status. More than $1,800 in back taxes reportedly are owed and there is disagreement over which organization is to pay them.

CANDLE LIGHT INN SOLD FOR REPORTED $600,000

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Catalan have announced the sale of their Candle Light Inn this week to a group of Monterey Peninsula residents.

The inn is located on San Carlos between Fifth and Fourth and runs through the block to Dolores.

The Catalans, long-time Carmel innkeepers, built the Candle Light in 1961 under Carmel's then-new motel ordinance, creating a charming early American atmosphere.

AN EARLY HOME: Built in 1902 by the same builder who built La Playa Hotel. The authentic and sensitive restoration was done by antique buffs who brought in turn-of-the-century treasures from all over the country: oak lath walls, tin ceilings, stained-glass windows, pull-chain toilet, antique mantels, light fixtures, wainscoting and plate rails. But the plumbing, wiring and heating system are brand new. Located south of Ocean Avenue and a short walk from beach and town, there are three bedrooms, two baths, large parlor and family room to fill with your period antiques.

House on the Ridge in Carmel Valley

Via Mariquita turns west off Tierra Grande near the top, then angles south along a high ridge that looks east and south to shimmering ranges and west to nearby hills as primitive today as they were centuries ago. Along the ridge are several houses, each set on about an acre of view-blessed land.

The one at No. 25440 is redwood on the outside, shake-roofed, decked fore and aft, and built in 4 ingeniously integrated sections. All are square, with heavy rising beams meeting at an apex, of different sizes and quite different functions.

Number one is the living area: living room and entrance hall, dining room and kitchen. It's a little over 24 feet square with massive beams centering on a point that rises dramatically above the functioning spaces. The kitchen, tile floored and completely equipped, is surrounded by half-height walls. A pass-through connects it to the dining room which, in turn, is separated by a waist-high divider from the living room. The latter is spacious (22 × 14), with distressed oak flooring, picture windows facing the eastern mountains, and a massive fireplace commanding the room.

Directly behind this is a square chamber facing west, about 13 feet square: the family room with its fireplace, doors out to a hot tub equipped private deck, and views of the western hills. From this a door opens south to the 3rd square unit, the bedroom wing.

Here are 3 generous bedrooms, the master suite facing front and opening to a sheltered deck; the other bedrooms facing west and overlooking the nearby hills. There are two large bedrooms, each with tub and shower and windows opening to private, secret gardens. All of these rooms are beamed, with the focus at a point above the bedroom corridor.

The 4th unit is the 20 × 20 double garage, separated from the house but still attached by a breezeway coming in past the hot tub. The house is new, over 1800 square feet, beautifully finished and ready to move in. $249,500.

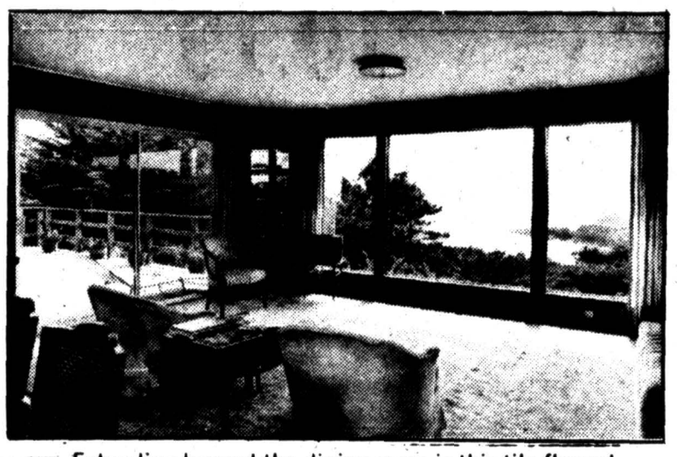
Carmel Highlands

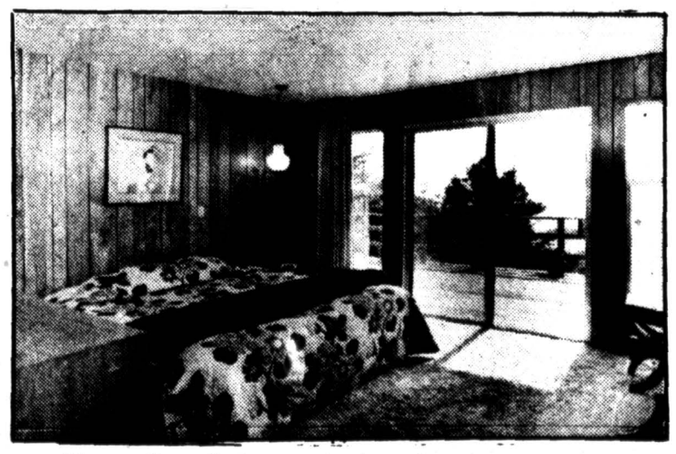
Surf surging along the shore of Yankee Point, also the open ocean beyond, are framed by windows in this home with path to a private beach below, exterior and shake roof of cedar, an expansive deck for outdoor pleasure.

In the living room are beamed ceiling, stone fireplace, a tile floor and the handsome pecan paneling enhancing almost all rooms of the entire, 2,208 sq. ft. interior.



Extending beyond the dining room is this tile-floored family room featuring sliding glass doors to the deck, a window wall for seeing sunsets and spouting whales.

Tiled walls and countertops, custom cabinets, built-in appliances distinguish the kitchen divided, by a brick barbecue, from the dining room with Franklin fireplace.



The master suite has ocean view, glass door access to the deck. Two more carpeted bedrooms, second bathroom, entry and sewing/laundry/utility area complete living space. In addition is a double garage with a workshop and genie door control. Other attractions of this high quality home are central vacuum and exterior lighting systems, parking court off a circular driveway leading past pines on the low-care-landscaped site—$495,000.
